IN AN EGYPTIAN HAREM

A WOMAN'S DESCRIPTION OF WHAT SHE SAW AND HEARD.

No One But the Husband May See the Wife's Hair—The Dancing Girls and Their Performances—The Children and Their Pretty Ways.

When I went out to Egypt a little more than eighteen months ago, it was with the determination to try and understand the harem lady. This I thought possible by making "calls" on certain pashas' wives whom I knew in and around Cairo, but I soon discovered, if I really was to know and understand the harem woman as she veritably is, I must live with her, as she herself lived in the harem. Having come to this conclusion, I discussed the ways and means with a Turkish pasha of my acquaintance, who got me the necessary introduction, and in less than a month I obtained the post of governess to four little children in the harem of one of the best-natured Egyptians in the interior of Egypt.

The word "harem," which has, to English ears, such an ominous sound, simply means in Arabic, "females," or "———a." I believe the original meaning was "forbidden." For an easterner to speak of women, as women, is considered highly improper. He must call them harema. The harem of a man is, therefore, the apartments set apart for the sole use of the women and their children. These are usually the whole of the first floor of the palace. No man may enter but the husband, and sometimes certain of the male relatives; but I have known a case where the head of the harem would admit none of his male relatives to the harem. The harem usually consists of the wives to the number of four; female slaves (these I speak of were black), and female free women, who were natives of Lower Egypt. The slaves are the husband's property, and he may use them as concubines or not, as he desires.

It is considered indelicate for a lady to allow anyone but her husband to see her hair, and unclean for any to grow upon her face or body. Indoors, therefore, if she respect herself, she wears a head dress which hides the hair, and is by no means unbecoming. When out in the carriage she allows only the eyes to be seen.

The harem lady is bound to be, from her bringing up, of a low type. Her only education is the idea to be the plaything of some rich man—that rich man, of course, being her legal husband. From babyhood she is taught certain exercises of her body, which, to any pure-minded European, are disgusting. She has no life outside of her bath, her body, the visits of her husband, and, in a very mild way, her children. For recreation, a eunuch will take her for a drive, to call on another harem in the harem closed carriage, and for amusement a dancing girl will be brought into the harem, or, if the house is in mourning, a sheikh will chant the Koran in the men's quarters, when the women gather on the harem terrace to listen. The room in which the dancing took place was a large entrance room in the harem, about seventy feet by sixty. Off this room were all the bedrooms. Each bedroom opened into this room, and there was no communication to the bedrooms except through this room. It was furnished in the usual oriental style—heavy silk carpets and curtains, divans all round the walls, floor cushions on the floors, and a marble table in the centre. The Ghawazee, or dancing girls would be sent for, and, with much clatter of shoes, would paddle into this room, removing their outdoor clothing. Coffee, cigarettes and cognac would be handed them—the latter, as they say, to remove the veil of modesty from before their eyes! We would all then recline on the divans, with cigarettes and coffee to hand, and the slaves would fan us. An ex-dancing woman, who had grown too old to dance, would begin to beat the darabukeh, or drum, another would produce a most monotonous discord, in excellent time on the kemengeh, a the kemengeh, a stringed instrument, while a third would blow through a sort of flute. The great point to each of them, so it seemed to me, was the time, which the performer on the darabukeh seemed to have at her own disposal. When they had fairly warmed to their work, a Ghawazee would get up, and, with a cigarette in her mouth, begin to dance. What this dance is like it would be difficult for me to describe. A series of wriggles of the body to the time of the music, which begins slowly, gradually getting faster and faster, till one is fairly dazed, when the dancer suddenly throws herself on her back on a floor cushion, all the while wriggling to the music, which gets slower and slower till it stops. The dance usually lasts about half an hour, but I have seen one Ghawazee who kept it up for an hour and a half, only stopping to wipe the perspiration from her face. One of these exhibitions is quite enough to disgust any European woman, no matter how broad minded, but, whenever the dancing girls come to the harem, it is one of the duties of the governess to be present with her pupils, that the little girls may learn to imitate the movements.

Should one of the ladies be indisposed, she remains in her room. A slave places her slippers, the satin slippers worn in the house, outside her door. Then we would all go into her room, sit upon divans or floor cushions, drink the tiny cups of black coffee and smoke unlimited cigarettes, and discuss the good qualities of the patent in lawtons. If sewers suffering pain one of the ladies would say, "God, who sent it you, help you to bear it!" when we would all respond, "By the prophet, your talk is good." Then another silence would be broken by some one remarking, "Suffering was made by God, all praise to His name! but it was meant for giants." But God the made death. Death is the finer work of the two." This latter saying was a very common one, and my pupils often made use of it to me if I had a toothache or headache. It was always quoted as though it were quite original. The calm an[illegible] they would leave the sick room, after assuring the occupant that "if she died the world would be a perfect blank to them," and then stolidly walk into the next room and abuse her roundly, and with a fierceness which was horrible, rather astonished me, and showed me how little real sympathy they had with one another. Their jealousy of one another was fiendish in its intensity, and I sympathized with the pasha when he said to me how happy Englishmen must be with no wives to quarrel over them.

The great saving clause to the life in the harem for a European is the children. They are the most perfectly charming and straightforward little beings imaginable. How can I tell you of all their little tendernesses and politenesses? There was no acting or coquetry with them—they simply did not understand it. From the youngest to the eldest, too, their sense of logic was acute. Request one of these little darlings to do anything out of the ordinary routine and he will at once ask the logic for it. If you can give him a logical reason you may rest assured that that particular request will be obeyed always without further comment.

What strikes me is, what could we not make of these little men and women if we had them from babyhood? How can we expect great things of a nation of men who are brought up and pass the most impressionable time of their lives with these harem women and their interests? It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle. Let me finish by telling you a little incident of harem child life which happened to me.

I was sitting in my room one evening weeping, when one of my pupils, a lad of about nine years, came in, and looking at me intently said, "Why weepest thou?"

I replied, "For no reason."

He continued to look at me for a second or two in a puzzled manner, and then a look of comprehension came into his wonderful black eyes, and, mounting on a chair, he began carefully to remove the portraits of a dead relative of mine, placing them out of sight in my writing desk. When he had finished, he came to me, and, embracing me warmly, said, "Madam, come into my room and see me dance."—The Sketch.

AN INCORRIGIBLE PRINCESS.

A romantic case just brought to light through the Children's Aid Society is that of Nanette Dantzig, a flaxen-haired, blue-eyed Dane of 11 years. Nanette's father was a linguist, and had charge of the royal archives in Denmark. Her mother came of a good old Danish family, and it is said will inherit money and estate. Her paternal grandfather had been a trusted officer in the royal family, and was supposed to have been the bar sinister of a royal personage, to whom he bore great likeness.

Domestic trouble compelled the Dantzigs to leave Denmark. Last fall they arrived in America, and settled in this city, where the father tried to earn a precarious living by teaching the continental languages. His health failed him and he fell an easy victim to tuberculosis. Mrs. Dantzig contributed to the family support by taking in sewing. Nanette was kept home from school to do the housework and this led to disputes, one of which she overheard. Like all royal progenies Nanette was self-willed and inclined to be incorrigible.

One day she ran away. An officer took her to a station-house and communicated with the society in whose care she has since remained. At the first home in which the society placed her to board she showed her royal proclivities to a marked degree, pilfering everything she could in the way of jewelry and laces. Of course she had to be removed. She promised to do better.

The next place the society procured for her was with a refined family in the country. Here Nanette read in a book of etiquette that to wear jewelry was bad form. Simultaneously Nanette discarded rings, pins and such things as unbecoming one of royal pedigree. She had learned to play the piano, showed marked artistic ability which the people are cultivating, and in learning, moreover, all the useful arts, dressmaking, millinery, housekeeping, which she no longer regards as infra dig. Possibly this little left-handed princess of an honored Danish race may return to her own land and people; until she reaches "woman's estate," however—unless some of her relatives send or come for her—she will remain a ward of the society.—Philadelphia Telegram.

An Odd Custom.

The oldest temperance society in the world is the abstaining commune in Achlyka, in Siberia, all of whose members are strict teetotallers every day in the year except one. Regularly on the first day of September, year after year, all the adult members of the commune asemble in the parish church, and everyone takes a solemn vow before the altar to drink no wine, beer or spirits "from the morow" of the following day for the whole year. The clause, "from the morrow" is introduced in order to give them a reward for their vitues in the shape of a whole day of drunken carnival. As soon as they leave the church they begin to indulge in a horrible Bacchanalian drinking, which continues throughout the day, until neither man nor women in the village is sober. This is naturally followed by considerable physical suffering, and then by mental remorse, whereupon the penitent parish enters upon its twelvemonth of model sobriety, and all live like the Rechabites. Some students imagine that this queer proceeding may be a prehistoric tribal custom.

Carried the Joke Too Far.

"I have carried this joke a little too far," remarked the humorist, as he found that he had walked six blocks beyond the office of the Weekly Comic Syracuse Post.

"My six-year-old daughter, Bella, was afflicted with eczema for 24 months, the principal seat of eruption being behind her ears. I tried almost every remedy I saw advertised, bought innumerable medicines and soaps, and took the child to medical specialists in skin diseases, but without result. Finally, a week ago, I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and the first application showed the curative effect of the Remedy. We have used only one-sixth of the box, but the change is very marked; the eruption has all disappeared, and I can confidently say my child is cured. (Signed) MAXWELL JOHNSTON. 112 Anne St., Toronto

ST. JOHN, N. B., Aug. 12—The many cases of marvellous restoration to health from various forms of kidney trouble which have been constantly appearing in the daily press of the Dominion have for sometime awakened the liveliest interest here, and the remedy by which the cures were effected namely, Dodd's Kidney Pills, are obtaining great celebrity throughout the province. The appearance of the testimonials of Drs. Rose and McCormick stating the benefits which they had personally derived from their use was considered a sufficient sign of the merits of the remedy, and the other interesting and wonderful cases which have since been chronicled has caused the specific to have an exceptional sale.

Lord Roberts the other day gave strong reasons for reversing Lord Rosebery's policy of abandoning Chitral and withdrawing to the old frontier. These are only a few of the foreign questions with which the first minister must deal now that he is well settled in his office.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.
