

The French "Mystery."

The speculative political affairs of France are more or less involved in mystery. Prince Jerome favors the existing Republican regime. It was natural enough. The younger branches of the Royalist race favored it too. Why not the younger branches of the Bonapartists? If the descendants of Philip Egalite lean towards a republic, why not the descendants of the "Little Corporal"? That a Bonaparte hoping for succession, in time to Imperial honors, should favor the Republican Government that he finds existing, is no great historical wonder. It was in that way that their great founder began, and in that way he completed his career. He joined the Republic, served the Republic, propagated the Republic, fought for the Republic, and mastered the Republic. The Family Tree of the Bonapartes did not

"Spring from the midriff of a prostrate king

but sprang up in a generation from the compost heap of the Revolution. Of course the times have changed since young Napoleon was sent to clear the streets of Paris, and secure the peace of the Assembly. It is one of the most remarkable things about a remarkable era that the Revolution of 1798 was accomplished and the Republic established to totally against the will of the French people. "There is a Republic, but there are no Republicans," said one of the agitators. It was terror that produced the submission. In England, a century before, a new dynasty was established in peace with the vast majority of the people still true in heart to the deposed Stuarts. It was the aristocrats who brought about the revolution. Perhaps we may say it was the aristocrats who brought about the latter revolution too—in a different manner.

But, as has been said, the traditions of the Bonapartes are strong, and as one Crown came out of the Republic for them, they perhaps hope for another in the same line of acquisition—at least that may be Jerome's way of looking at it. The spirit of the great uncle prevails still. In his last will and testament the late Napoleon III. addressed these words to his son the ill-fated Prince Imperial: "You must reflect that from the heavens on high those whom you have loved look down upon you. It is the soul of my great uncle that has always inspired and sustained me. It will be the same with my son, for he will be worthy of his name." No one can say that the young Prince has been unworthy of it. But the soul of the great uncle will witness no more deeds of his. It is Jerome who takes up the Crown, and gives it to the Republic. Will the Republic ever give it back again? This is the French mystery.

CATARRH.

Constitutional Catarrh Remedy

CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy.

T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third, I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head.

A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister.
