STATESMANLIKE SPEECH.

to brace ourselves for the settlement of the dominions and territories which it has ravaged and to take care that the settlement shall make it safe from any similar experience (cheers); and when that is done you will, as I honestly and conscientiously believe, have to set yourselves to the third function, and the most important of all—that of setting your Empire on a business footing. In that enterprise Chatham, I have no doubt, will bear a hand. The Government that undertakes it will have to look to the support of every community of the Empire, to communities much inferior in importance to the municipality of Chatham. I am encouraged, Mr. Mayor, by one circumstance which I only learnt yesterday to think that you in Chatham have cause to specially inspire in this work. You wear on your neck the chain and badge of the Doges of Venice. You must therefore always remember, when you see that symbol, that it once adorned the chief of a State scarcely less great than our own, not less commercial, not less naval, not less predominant, which faded away like an empty dream because its rulers took no thought for the future, and did not live abreast with the time. I take it, then, that this symbol that you wear may be regarded by us as a sign of a resolution on behalf of this community that you are not prepared, from want of fearless consideration of the situation, to see your country undergo the fate that overtook Venice; that you will strive, each according to your rights and each according to your capacity, to take care that the Empire in the future shall realize our ideal of an Empire without menace and without oppression, the model State, ruled by model institutions, and inhabited by the model race. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)
The toast was enthusiastically honoured, and the Mayor responded.

There is no ambition nobler than that of the hardworking farmer. He toils early and late to secure for himself and his family that most lasting of fortunes, an allotment of land, clear of indebtedness. No other fortune is so secure and permanent. There are in England families of small farmers, living in assured comfort and contentment, upon the lands acquired by their forefathers 500 years ago.
The achievement of the farmer's ambition depends a great deal upon the good health of himself and his family. If they suffer from bilious attacks and indigestion and do not promptly resort to the right remedy, almost any known sickness may be the result. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a speedy cure for biliousness, indigestion and the evils that follow them. It makes the liver active, the digestion perfect, the appetite keen and the blood pure, and builds healthy flesh and muscle. An honest druggist won't urge upon you a substitute.
"I send you my most sincere thanks for the benefit I have received from your medicine," writes Edward D. O'Neill, Esq., of No. 21 Swan St., Cleveland, Ohio. "I hope you will publish the same as it may benefit some other poor sufferer who is troubled in a like manner. I was laid up with lumbago or sciatic rheumatism. I could only walk with help of two sticks for nine weeks. I tried several remedies and doctored with some of our best physicians and was not getting relief. So I tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After using two bottles of it I was all right."
Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser teaches you all about the home-treatment of diseases. It contains 1,008 pages and 300 illustrations. It used to cost $1.50; now it's FREE. For paper-cover, send 31 one-cent stamps, to cover customs and mailing; cloth-cover, 50 stamps. Address, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A TORNADO IN OPERATION.

How It Sweeps Madly Along Like a Big Whirling Top.
Have you ever seen a tornado in operation—watched its course from a safe distance and noticed the awful phenomena attending its progress? One sultry Sunday afternoon in June I was standing in front of the Kansas City Central police station chatting with the late Thomas M. Speers, then and for many years chief of police of the western Missouri metropolis. We were grubbing at the intolerable heat, and the chief, who has been a frontiersman in his youth, was warning all comers that "Death's valley" and the hottest holes in the sunken desert of the far west could not beat it. Suddenly a mysterious gloom came down over the city—a creepy feeling at the roots of the hair. For an instant the sultry calm became more oppressive than ever, and to breathe seemed to require an effort. Then little vagrant currents of air darted hither and yon, apparently with no definite purpose or destination in view. Glancing about, our gaze shortly rested on a yellowish cloud that was crossing the city some 10 or a dozen blocks away. Its form and motion suggested an enormous peg top inclined at a sharp angle, but spinning merrily along. At the distance from which we were observing it its progress seemed slow, but a little calculation afterward showed that it had crossed the entire breadth of the city in a very few minutes.
"Looks like a California waterspout," said Speers. "No; it's an old twister, and there's murder in it."
A moment later mounted policemen were ralloping up to report a cyclone, telephone calls for ambulances, patrol wagons and help were pouring in, fire alarms were summoning the department for work among the wreckage, and crowds were hurrying to the scene of destruction. The tornado had crossed the city in almost as straight a line as if its trail had been surveyed and staked out for it in advance. For almost the entire distance its track was between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, and hardly a house in the two or three miles of its spin across the city escaped damage. On the hilltops it made complete wreckage of everything in its path. In the depressions there was much less damage, as it seemed to jump from hill to hill. Brick structures suffered most, some of them, notably one or two churches, being reduced almost to powder. Marvelous as it may seem, there were not more than seven or eight persons killed and perhaps five times as many more or less seriously hurt. The damage to property amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars.
Before the great cloud of dust raised by the terrific beam's work had cleared away the sun was shining, the atmosphere was calm and deliciously cool, and nature smiled as innocently as if tragedy formed no part of the repertory.—Minneapolis Times.

A SPOOK PHOTOGRAPH.
It Was Easy to Make, but It Puzzled the Experts.
A photographer of this city opened a little drawer in his roll top desk and took out a somewhat battered carte de visite of the size and shape popular 35 or 40 years ago. It represented a young man seated at a table, and behind him was the very dimly outlined figure of a woman. The young man wore the costume of the antebellum dandy, and the woman seemed to have a crinoline under her voluminous skirts. She was barely discernible, and the legs of the table could be seen through her dress.
"That," said the photographer smilingly, "is a good specimen of the 'spirit photographs' which once created such a furore in this country. As you may see by the stamp, it was taken by John U. Galt on Broadway, New York, and, considering the progress of the art in those days, it is a very creditable piece of work from a technical standpoint.
"The spirit figure, which puzzled scientists and gave rise to all sorts of preposterous theories, is such a palpable trick that it is hard for a modern operator to understand how anybody could have been deceived by it. The plates of that period were very slow, and an exposure of from 60 to 80 seconds was necessary to secure a fairly sharp image.
"In this picture the woman was evidently given an exposure of about five seconds and the plate laid away in the dark against the arrival of the dupe. When the latter took his place, the camera was uncovered for the full time, and the result you can see before you. The spook picture was made intentionally very dim, so that the face could be recognized for almost anybody, and the whole thing was as easy as rolling off a log. Any modern amateur could do the work with a $5 machine, yet these little cards were eagerly purchased at $20 apiece in gold. The world has certainly moved since then, hasn't it?"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
