Let's Talk It Over

The wee small hours of the morning is perhaps the most important time of all to exercise care in driving a car through the streets of a town or city. At the height of rush hours on main thoroughfares all drivers are keyed up to caution and collision is less likely. In the silent watches of the night your chances of meeting a car at an intersection is so small that drivers are sometimes inclined to take chances, with occasional disastrous results. It behooves us to proceed slowly and with caution even if the hour is somewhat past our regular bed time.

The ladies of the Summerside branch of the I.O.E. are having another flower show. Towards the end of the summer season when Nature is beginning to look towards the time when she will doff her flowered dress for the more sombre habiliments of autumn, these ladies invite you to bring a little of the beauty that pervades your gardens to a central location for a glorious get-together of summer's proud pageantry of color. The "Coronation Corner" should especially tax your ingenuity for combining reds, whites and blues in solar designs most pleasing to the eye. As fine music uses the ear to usher in delight to the soul, so does such a flower display through the medium of the eye. The first show put on by these enterprising ladies was an outstanding success.

One of the arguments heard in electioneering is that if you elect a candidate not of the same party as the Government, you stand a good chance of having your particular area neglected by the powers that be. This is a threat that smacks a little of the flavor of dictatorship. One of the things we pride ourselves on in free democracies is protection for minorities. A government, "for the people," that will neglect a constituency because it has elected a member of Her Majesty's loyal opposition, without which democratic government cannot function properly, falls rather sadly short of the ideal.

Home Destroyed By Fire At Alberton.

Fire caused by an exploding gasoline lantern completely destroyed the home of Mr. Ralph Adams at Elmadae about 11 o'clock Wednesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Adams and their three children had just arrived home from attending a church service, when the explosion occurred shortly after Mr. Adams had lit an oil lamp close beside the gas lantern. The flames spread so rapidly that the occupants of the dwelling barely had time to rush outside. A small quantity of household goods was salvaged through a window but practically all of the contents of the dwelling was lost. Some insurance was carried.

Wind Keeps Some Lobstermen Ashore

Lobster fishermen on the west shore of Prince Edward Island succeeded in setting out approximately one half of their traps in preparation for the fall season which officially opens today, Aug. 7th in the area extending from North Cape to Victoria. Despite a stiff north west breeze which kept many boats ashore in some sections, thousands of traps were put out in what is hoped will prove to be the best locations. With the present prevailing high prices and the prospect of continued good weather fishermen on the south side are in hopes of a good fall season.

Closest to Marlene, who this year became the only Canadian to win the British Open amateur tournament, was Mary Gay from the Westmount Club of Kitchener, Ont. with a one-over-par 77. Rae Milligan of Jasper, Alta., and Mrs. J.B. Seawright of Toronto, were in a third-place tie with 79 each and bracketed at 80 were Miss Ada MacKenzie of Toronto, five-times winner of the championship, and Shirley Woodley, also Toronto. The tournament is a prelude to the week long Canadian women's open championships at the London Hunt and Country Club next week. Fifteen-year-old Judith Darling of Hudson Heights, Que., demonstrated that she is a comer with a 44-41-35. The youngster has been playing only two years and her score was the best she had ever made.
