Pins for Insects.

It may not be generally known that the nature of the pins used in fastening the specimens in collections of insects is a matter of great importance. Ordinary brass pins, even when well thinned, are very liable to oxidize in the body of the insect, and often thus destroy rare and valuable specimens. Black varnished pins are almost as bad, as the glaze soon cracks, leaving the metal exposed. Even plated pins do not appear to resist the action of the compounds developed in the body of the insect, though solid silver ones will, so that cheap silver may at least be a boon to the entomologists. A bronze pin has found favor of late, but is far from being a perfect fastener. The latest thing is a nickel alloy, which possesses decided advantages of the common kind, whose basis is brass.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Hungry People.

The Australians pass the greater part of their time at the table. At 7 they take tea and bread and butter. At 8:30 they breakfast on cold meats, chops or steaks, eggs and bacon and tea. At 11 most of them take a light lunch of beer and biscuit, or tea and bread and butter, according to their sex. At 1, or 1:30, they dine, and again the teapot comes into requisition. At 3 afternoon tea is served and swallowed. From 6 to 7 all Australia, broadly speaking, is taking its third meal, and again drinking tea. Those who stay up at all late sometimes supplement this with a light collation at 10.

Good Pay.

In twenty-five years Madam Sarah Bernhardt has, it is announced, been paid £200,000 for her exertions on the stage, and she is now fulfilling a comparatively short engagement which will add £80,000 to that large sum.

Convincing Proof.

A LOVER AND HIS LASS.

Their Dialogue After Reading the Medical Press.

HE:
Take, oh! take those lips away!
Not but what I want to kiss them,
Not but what, believe, me, pray,
I most certainly shall miss them.
Heretofore, you know, I've joyed
In our frequent lip-communion;
Never yet have I been cloyed
With the sweets of labial union;
"Tis on other grounds, I say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

My decision is no whim,
Due, my love, to fit of vapors,
'Tis the consequence most grim
Of perusing doctors' papers:
For these journals now declare,
With malign persistance, Beryl,
That each kiss in which we share
Reeks (excuse the word) with peril.
That is why I'm forced to say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

SHE:
Try not thus to me dissuade,
For in vain is your endeavor,
What, shall I shrink back afraid,
When my Edwin dares? No never!
Darling, you know well our case,
Love has bound us in one tether,
So, if there be risks to face,
We shall face them both together;
As you love me, then, don't say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

HE AND SHE:
We will never be coerced
By the bullying bacillus,
Doctors, though they say their worst,
With dismay shall never fill us,
Let us, therefore, both of us,
Their last raven-croak dismissing,
Show that thus—and thus—and thus!
We still mean to go on kissing.
Neither of us means to say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"
—London Truth.

A GIFTED PARISIAN DOG.

He Knew a Better Trick Than Barking at the Burglars.

An amazing story of canine sagacity is told in a recent number of La Lanterne, of Paris. M. and Mme. Herisson, living in the Rue St. Sauveur, went to the theatre one evening, leaving their domicile guarded only by a very intelligent little dog, who answered to the name of Castor. They valued him highly, and often remarked:

"Castor? We would not sell him for 10,000 francs."

They had not been long away when burglars entered the house. Castor, who was at that moment in the kitchen, whiling away the hours by chasing his tail, heard the noise, and not recognizing his master's step, pricked up his ears and listened. A moment more and he decided it must be thieves. To the proverbial fidelity of his race there was added in this wonderful dog the wisdom of serpents. Realizing that if he barked the intruders would seize and silence him forever, he sat down, covered his head with his paws and thought intently. At last a light broke over his mind, and he stole noiselessly from the house and ran swiftly to a near-by building which was in the course of construction. There he seized a lighted lantern in his mouth and returned with it to the house.

The ruse met with the success it deserved. The thieves, seeing the light in the adjoining room, believed themselves detected, and fled. Castor's joy knew no bounds, and when his owners returned they found him still rubbing his paws with satisfaction.

The Donkey in Jokes.

"By Jove!" said the country squire who had got the worst of an argument with Sydney Smith, "if I had a son who was a donkey, I'd make a parson of him straight away."

"Possibly," returned the wit, "but your father was evidently of a different mind." That is one type. Here is another: A man had a portrait taken with his children in a donkey carriage, he standing at the animal's head. Showing it to a friend, he asked his opinion of the likeness. "It's the very image of you," was the verdict, "but who is that holding your head?"

Here is still another specimen that recalls the "Society Upon the Stainslaw:" Two gentlemen in an auction-room were disputing the possession of a picture by a celebrated painter, which faithfully represented an ass. Finally one of them said: "My dear sir, it is of no use, I shall not give in. The painting once belonged to my grandfather and I intend to have it."

"Oh! in that case," replied his rival, suavely, "I will give it up. I think you are fully entitled to it if it is one of your family portraits."

Next to this we may place the retort of the Irish girl, who, caught in the act of playing on Sunday morning and being accosted by the parish priest with the greeting, "Good morning, daughter of the evil one," replied promptly, "Good morning, father!"

The Kaiser Gavotte.

A square dance in which society is much interested is the Kaiser gavotte. This dance owes its origin to a German professor, who gave it its name in honor of Emperor William. The dance so delighted His Majesty that he has ordered it to be danced at all the Court balls.

The Kaiser gavotte is a stately dance much resembling the minuet. As danced at the German Court balls a profound obeisance to the Emperor and Empress begins and ends the dance. The continuous figure leave the beholder in a transport of admiration. Only a professor of dancing could describe every figure. Two figures which are particularly beautiful are called the rosette and the star.

The gavotte balance, however, is the most effective figure in the dance. The ladies, with their left hands, very daintily catch their skirts, lifting them ever so little, still enough to show satin slippers and clouds of lace. With right hands held high over their heads, they catch their partners' hands, and in this wise, balancing, one couple following another in succession, they make a grand tour of the ballroom. All the steps are stately and dignified, and only persons with natural grace can dance the Kaiser gavotte well.

Henry Irving's Legs.

Some time ago, when Henry Irving was in Edinburgh, a Scotch clergyman came and informed him that he was to attend the theatre that week for the first time in his life, to see one of the Lyceum productions. Irving felt duly flattered, and so expressed himself; but the divine, after a certain amount of stammering, confessed that he did not wish to see a play in which there was a ballet. Irving, greatly puzzled, informed him that there was no dancing in the plays he was then producing, but that, according to the slang of the "profession," the supernumeraries of both sexes were "the ballet," and hence probably arose his visitor's mistake. The worthy man's face beamed, and he took an affectionate leave of his host; but at the door he was seized with misgivings and suddenly demanded, point-blank: "If there is no ballet, Mr. Irving, why do people talk so much about your legs?" Irving's answer has not been chronicled.

A Perfect Cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"It affords me much pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. My son was afflicted with great pain in the joints, accompanied with swelling so bad that he could not get up stairs to bed without crawling on hands and knees. I was very anxious about him, and having read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures, I determined to try it, and got a half-dozen bottles, four of which entirely cured him." MRS. G. A.
