Rebels In First

There is nothing to indicate any Red Chinese are actually in the fight, but it is clear the rebels are coached in the attacks by advisers behind their lines. The Vietnam, renewing their assaults after an artillery barrage Monday first concentrated on a French defence position north of the fortress. Attacking at 3 a.m., they fought their way into the southern part of the position by 5 a.m. The French immediately counter-attacked with tanks from the fortress. Heavy fighting followed.

Yesterday In The Legislature

Mr. Harvey Douglas, Liberal member from Second King's, adjourned the debate on the Draft Address in the Legislature yesterday evening and will speak when the House re-opens this afternoon. On a question of privilege Dr. W. J. P. MacMillan, senator member from Charlottetown, arose to correct former statements made in a newspaper release last week by Senator J. Walter Jones. Dr. MacMillan termed the statements "Tissue falsehoods by Senator Jones. I had hoped that the might change his whole course of life and general attitude when he went to the Senate but I guess he is too old for that now," stated Dr. MacMillan. "If he did not agree what I said about his abolition of Latin in the country schools he should have given some reason why," continued the Doctor. "I never made the statement about the tourist industry being a mess under George Fraser. I will repeat the statement I made, 'The loans to those who built cabins under the Jones Government are a mess.' His denial of my holding the office of Minister of Education was a complete falsehood," stated Dr. MacMillan and he presented several diplomas to the Legislature certifying that he had been Minister of Education in the early thirties. The Doctor also stated that when Prince of Wales College was rebuilt his two best friends in the establishing of the College were Rev. G. G. Patterson of Acadia University and Dr. George Truman of Mount Allison University. The Doctor was warned by the speaker Hon. Forrest Phillips that he would be out of order. He stated that he would reply more fully to Senator Jones' remarks during his speech on the budget. At the close of yesterday's session it was announced by the Premier that the Federation of Agriculture would present a brief to the Legislature at two o'clock on Thursday afternoon. The Premier also stated that night sessions would soon be introduced to wind up the Draft Address debate.

Mr. E. O. Beagan, Charlottetown, well-known railwayman throughout the Maritime Provinces, has been assigned the job of relieving Mr. A. E. Betts, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for the Canadian National lines in certain areas. The territorial jurisdiction covered by the assignment is contained east of Cochrane, Ont., and includes Montreal, Richmond, Que., Chicoutimi, Halifax, Yarmouth, Sydney, Newfoundland and the Seven Islands. Mr. Beagan entered the Railway service at Charlottetown in 1917 as a locomotive fireman and was promoted to engineer in 1935. He worked out of Riviere du Loup, Que., from 1927 to 1929 except for a short period in 1926 at Bridgeport, N.S. A further short period at Bridgeport followed in 1929. Mr. Beagan was engaged as locomotive fireman on all of the districts comprising the Eastern lines of the Canadian National. Following his mainline employment as fireman he was engineer on the various runs on the Island. As acting general chairman of the Brotherhood, Mr. Beagan represents 1175 members and holds office at Moncton, N.B. The position is tentative, pending the retirement of Mr. Betts.

Informative Address On Functions Of Police Force

Inspector Nevin

Inspector William H. Nevin, in charge of "I" Division of the R.C.M.P. in this Province, was guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday. Inspector Nevin spoke on "The functions and limitations of Police Forces Generally". Following his address the picture "Scarlet and Gold" was shown, giving a close and intimate view of the activities of the R.C.M.P. throughout Canada. The picture also dealt in detail with the "Rookies" and their education at headquarters in Regina and Rockcliffe. The speaker was introduced by Fred Cannon and thanked by Dr. Frank MacKinnon, who recalled the outstanding party played by Hon. David Laird of Charlottetown in the formation of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Inspector Nevin said: "As far back in the history of civilization as we care to look," said Inspector Nevin, "we find that some civil force has been necessary to protect members of a community and their property from one another. Just as armed bodies were needed to protect the community from hostile acts by outsiders, some means had to be found to deal with those within the community who refused to conform to the conduct deemed essential by that particular society. "In Canada the actual enforcement of the code of behavior is entrusted to the police; however, the development of this code or the laws and the regulations which compose it, is another matter entirely. This is the responsibility of the people themselves through their freely elected government. In the long run then the function of Canadian police forces is determined and dictated by the people and just as the laws outline the duties of the police, so do they also provide for strict limitation of police action. "In Canadian democracy the police, in principle and fact, are representatives of the people, doing their will as expressed through their government. In Canada the term "police" designates that civil instrument of government which enforces the laws and regulations that the people deem necessary for the maintenance of their recognized code of behavior. Under a totalitarian government the term has an entirely different meaning. There the laws are imposed on the people by the authorities and the police are in the main, the instruments of the authorities. The individual is subservient to the state. Colonial Period "The police organization as we know it, for Canada and the United States, began in the Colonial period. The colonists brought with them methods of local administration existing in England at that time. In addition to military guards, a civilian night watch system, was set up. All citizens took their turn in the night watch, which continued for many years. However, this system proved far from efficient and many citizens refused to do duty. Later, a civilian day watch was inaugurated but this also was unsatisfactory. So, as the years progressed the night watch system gradually evolved into the present-day system, and on this point mention should be made of Sir Robert Peele who in London in 1829 proposed the formation of a properly organized police force. The personnel of this force were commonly referred to as "Peelers". It won favour with the public as crimes against the person and property were gradually reduced. "Time was when police work demanded little more than physical strength and presence of mind but now a police force must be equipped with the latest in transport, communication and identification devices, and in the fields of physics, chemistry, biology, ballistics, and related sciences. And whereas the policeman of yesterday received little or no training, the policeman of today attends police schools and colleges where the fundamentals of crime detection are taught and studied, and the scientific aids to criminal investigation are examined. Complex Organization "A police force of any size is a complex organization. Many of its departments specialization. But the backbone is that group on the police or on detachment in the case of Provincial and Federal police. Here are the uniformed men who are continually in the eyes of the public, by whom the reputation and traditions of the organization have largely been built. They are immediately responsible for the peace and security of the citizens in their homes and on the streets. It is the policeman on point duty directing traffic who must see to the smooth flow of vehicles and the safety of the pedestrian. It is the constable on the beat checking the doors of business houses who is available for any emergency. The detachment is on call at any hour of the day and night. "In Canada we have four kinds of police forces, Federal, Provincial, Municipal and others such as company police. Today only two provinces, Quebec and Ontario, maintain their own provincial forces. The R.C.M.P., by contract, undertakes to police the other provinces. "There is excellent co-operation between all police forces in Canada. Information is continually exchanged and all forces have access to and make use of the R.C.M.P. central fingerprint and C.M.P. central Bureau at Ottawa. "All members of any police force in Canada are appointed peace

Stresses Role Of Philosophy

Dr. Lawrence E. Lynch, of the University of Toronto, in the third Centennial Year Lecture, which was held at St. Dunstan's University last night, told the audience that "To look for results without going into the background of the problem is to apply Sports Page technique and thinking to problems which are nearly always philosophical and theological." Dr. Lynch arrived in Charlottetown by plane yesterday evening and will leave tomorrow to conduct a seminar in Philosophy at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. This young man who could readily be visualized as a gridiron star, did in fact give up the opportunity to play professional football with the famous Argonaut team to continue his studies in Philosophy. Though still in his thirties the maturity of his studies and the range of his experiences as a teacher place him among the outstanding philosophers of the present day. Rev. John A. Sullivan of the Philosophy Department at St. Dunstan's introduced Dr. Lynch to the audience. Immediately he proposed his theme, "The Role of Philosophy in the Life of the Layman". Citing examples of the common temptation to look only at the surface of current issues Dr. Lynch took three current topics of interest: Communism, McCartyism, and Progressivism in Education. Each of these he dealt with briefly showing how a little depth of thought gives an insight into the problem which is amply rewarding to any layman. Superficial Policies "To approach Communism as a threat to insurance policies and bank accounts is so superficial that the real danger arising from the real vitality and real dynamism of Communism is overlooked. It is furthermore erroneous to look only at the atheism in Communism. We must see that it is something positive with a deity of its own. Its God is not a Christian God but does serve as a basis for a theology and on it is built a philosophy. "Similarly, there is more to McCartyism than meets the eye, than is contained in the printed accounts, and there is involved in Dr. Neatby's criticism more overtones than the unthinking man can hear. "We must never underestimate the interest of the layman in philosophy and theology." Dr. Lynch told his audience. Given an opportunity he will, especially when directed, give evidence of more serious thought than modern educators think possible. Plan Huge Biscuit, Cracker Factory TORONTO, (CP)—Christie Brown and Co., Ltd., of Toronto plans to build a multi-million dollar biscuit and cracker factory in Montreal. S. H. Young, president, announced Monday. The 26-acre site, in East Montreal, was bought from Canadian National Railways. Construction will start this summer and the plant is scheduled to be in operation by the end of next year. Spring Knives Continued from page 1 inal Code now in force was approved by Parliament. However, the section had not been "interpreted" by the courts since its enactment. The present law was absurd. It was an extraordinary proposition to prevent a person with a government contract making a contribution to the campaign funds of any political party. The new provision would place another restriction on a person with a government contract. It would be unlawful for him to attempt to get a "kickback" out of the contract he already possessed. During the debate Angus MacInnis (C.F.—Vancouver Kingsway) and R. R. Knight (C.F.—Saskatoon) disagreed on the degree to which civil servants should participate in politics. Mr. Knight placed there should be no limitation placed on the freedom of civil servants to work for political parties. However, Mr. MacInnis said that civil servants in high positions with access to confidential information should not be allowed full freedom to take part in politics. Two Candidates Continued from page 1 Progressive Conservatives in a close race against Thomas Bell, a Saint John, N.B., lawyer and MP for Saint John-Albert. The retiring president, Leon Balcer, MP for Trois-Rivieres, said the voting among the 100 delegates was "very close." Exact figures were not announced. Leadership No Issue The question of the party leadership is not expected to become an issue. As in past meetings there will be a motion of confidence in the leadership of Hon. George Drew. Similar motions of confidence were passed unanimously Monday by the Women's and Young PC Associations. Between 300 and 350 Conservative women heard addresses by both Mr. Drew and his wife. Both stressed the need for organization for the next general election. Mr. Drew told reporters he urged early nomination of party candidates in preparation for the election, and said he expects to see more Conservative women MPs added to the present three. Anton Chekhov, Russian author who died in 1904, was the grandson of a serf who managed to purchase his freedom.

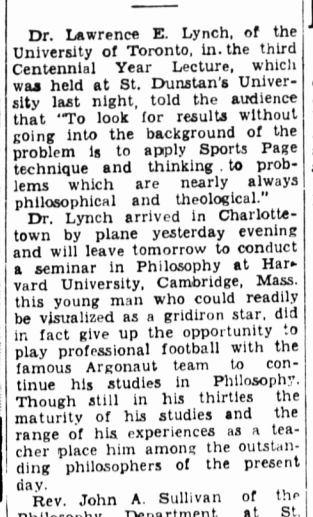

Mr. Dolan Sees Prospects Bright For Tourist Traffic

Mr. Leo Dolan

D. Leo Dolan, Director of the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, Ottawa, arrived in the city last evening and is scheduled to address a dinner meeting tonight at the Charlottetown Hotel, sponsored by the P. E. Island Inn Keepers and the Charlottetown Board of Trade. Commenting last evening on the tourist business during the past year, Mr. Dolan said that $302,000,000 had been expended by tourists in Canada, which constituted an increase of $27,000,000 over 1952, and six per cent over 1949 which was the previous record spending year by visitors to Canada. Over two and a half million motor vehicles crossed the border to remain in Canada for more than 48 hours, an increase of ten per cent over 1952. "We are starting with high hopes this year," Mr. Dolan said, "with 29,000 inquiries from the first of the year to March 1st. This is 7.3 per cent more than for the same period last year. Our advertising program is definitely drawing more inquiries than ever before and recently we received 6,826 inquiries in one day, the largest single day in the 20 year history of the Bureau." Mr. Dolan spoke of the increase in inquiries from Central Canada seeking more intimate knowledge of the Maritime Provinces, indicating the probability of an increase of such visitors to this area. "More Canadians visited the United States last year than ever before, due in part to the favourable rate of exchange under which 365 million Canadian Dollars were expended over the border," he said. "This is no time to slacken off," Mr. Dolan added, "you cannot relax in area promotional activities in the face of the keen competition for tourist business." Mr. Dolan heads the federal agency responsible for Canadian travel promotion and the overall interests of the tourist industry. He was first appointed in 1934, when the Bureau was established following a Senate Committee's investigation into the value of the industry to Canada. At the time of his appointment he was director of the New Brunswick Bureau of Information and Tourist Travel a post which he took over in 1931 following a 20-year newspaper career. In 1939 he was elected president of the First Inter-American Travel Congress at San Francisco. He is the only Canadian who is an Association member of the National Association of Travel Organizations in the United States, and his many honors include an appointment as aide-de-camp with the rank of Colonel, by the Governor of New Mexico. In the current travel promotion year Mr. Dolan is directing a program of nearly a million dollars of advertising in the United States, as well as making a round of speaking engagements in Canada and abroad. For a number of years he has averaged 50,000 miles of busi-

Charlottetown Red Cross Campaign Gets Underway

Major Michael Campbell

Today an army of 139 men and 10 women, under the general chairmanship of Major Michael Campbell, will start out on a concentrated four-day canvass for Red Cross contributions in Charlottetown. Division commanders, hoteliers, team captains and team members met at Red Cross Headquarters last evening to receive their canvassing cards and instructions. The cards for each canvasser, which had been previously sorted out into business establishments and sections so that no one would have far to go, were tabulated for each canvasser and team. Lt. Col. Leo F. MacDonald, provincial Red Cross president, urged the canvassers to stress the need for increased contributions this year to meet the increased objective necessitated by increased activities. He stated that the special names division in Charlottetown, headed by Capt. Orin Simons, had almost completed its calls and had met with good response. "The general campaign chairman for Charlottetown, Major Michael Campbell, said he would like the canvassers to complete as many of their calls as possible by Friday of this week when the returns are to be made at Red Cross headquarters.
