Medals, Honors System Is Suggested By Massey

GDN GEN MEDALS HONARS
By JAMES NELSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A system of medals and honors for Canadians, without titles or hereditary rights, should be instituted to recognize distinguished citizens, a former Governor-General says in his memoirs.

Vincent Massey, himself thrice-honored by the United Kingdom, says that under present circumstances the only honor a Canadian can receive is from foreign states, and Canada has nothing to offer distinguished foreigners in return.

Mr. Massey is a member of the U.K. Privy Council, giving him the prefix "right honorable" for life; a member of the Order of Companions of Honor, entitling him to put CH after his name; and holds the Royal Victorian Chain. He also has the CD—Canadian Forces Decoration—received when he was Governor - General and commander-in-chief.

In his book, What's Past Is Prologue, he urges establishment of "a non-titular Canadian order, with the usual gradations representing various forms of service, and with an appropriate name."

Such an honor was recommended by the Canadian Commons in 1942 and created the following year in the Canada Medal which, although approved by the Crown, has never been awarded anyone.

The story of honors for Canadians, since they were abolished in 1919 by a sweeping Commons resolution, "does not read like the record of the mature country that we believe we are," Mr. Massey says.

He blames it on the "nothing less than pathological" opposition of the late W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister with one short interruption from 1921 to 1930 and again from 1935 to 1948.

ACCEPTED AWARDS

"He was determined to bury the question as deep as he could," Mr. Massey says, even though Mr. King accepted the Order of Merit from King George VI and decorations from a number of Allied powers at the end of the Second World War.

Mr. Massey recalls that in 1946 Paul Martin—then secretary of state in the King cabinet and now external affairs minister in the government of Prime Minister Pearson—consulted the British government on its honors system. Mr. Martin was "trying to steer . . . the proposed Canadian Order past the shoals of the PM's (King's) reluctance and even hostility to the idea of honors."

"Nearly every country in the world today has a system that enables it to recognize services to the community in all degrees of importance," Mr. Massey adds.

"What we require in Canada, as a normal piece of national equipment, is a non-titular honors system of our own, the awards being bestowed by the sovereign on the advice of the government of Canada. This would fill a gap in Canadian life and would without doubt help to unify the community as a whole. We need the occasional thank-you from official sources offered to Canadians whose services deserve it."

He suggests setting up an honors committee, presided over by a high court judge, and composed of officials—not politicians—who would have to approve awards. The government would have power to reject committee recommendations but not to act without committee approval.

Health Dept. Will Review Cure Value Claims For Food

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department will review advertising that might breach the ban on encouraging use of certain foods as treatment, prevention or cure in certain diseases — specifically heart disease in this case.

This review will begin shortly and take some time, it was indicated by Eleanor M. Ordway, chief of the consumer relations division of the health department's food and drug directorate.

The advertisements involved would be those concerned with the medical theory that a blood substance called cholesterol is a factor in heart disease and that polyunsaturated fats are useful in lowering the cholesterol level. Vegetable oils contain polyunsaturated fats. Animal fats like butter don't.

CONSUMER REACTION

Miss Ordway and her assistant, Elza J. Janssens, recently completed a study of consumer reaction to advertising of polyunsaturated fats and cholesterol. It found that a "significant proportion" of Canadians associate these fats with heart disease and that a "large proportion" associate cholesterol with heart disease.

Said the study:

"There is considerable radio and television advertising originating abroad that does take advantage of the news stories or articles suggesting the role of dietary fats in relation to heart diseases and to promote the use of specific foods for the prevention of such disease. . . .

The study was not concerned with the truth or falsity of such advertisements but it noted that they are specifically banned "to help prevent the encouragement of self-diagnosis and self-treatment" In a specified list of diseases including heart disease.

CUPE Launches Campaign To Revitalize Labor Unions

By ROBERT RICE

WINNIPEG (CP)—The fledgling Canadian Union of Public Employees (CLC) has launched a long-range campaign aimed at revamping and revitalizing organized labor in Canada.

As expected, the founding convention of the new 84,000-member union decided Thursday to fight for greater autonomy for Canadian workers in international unions and for a consolidation of rival unions into fewer but bigger unions.

The convention ordered CUPE leaders to raise both issues on the floor of the Canadian Labor Congress convention in Montreal next April.

Specifically, the new union will seek:

1. To rewrite the CLC constitution to set Jan. 1, 1965, as deadline for international unions to grant full autonomy to their Canadian membership.

SEEK MERGERS

2. To empower the CLC to take the initiative in leading rival unions into mergers to form fewer but bigger unions.

The new union stepped onto the Canadian labor scene this week as a result of the merger of two former rivals—the National Union of Public Employees and the National Union of Public Service Employees.

CUPE is the biggest all-Canadian union in the country and is flexing its muscles as a nationalistic body, seeking a greater voice for Canadian workers in unions based in the U.S.

Delegates wrapped up their three-day convention Thursday by deciding to hold their 1965 convention in Vancouver.

Opening lead—king of clubs.

This hand arose in the world championship match between Italy and the United States, played in Naples in 1951. It was Board No. 18S of the 320-board match and the Italians were far behind at the time.

Baroni held the South cards for Italy and Franco was North Baroni opened with an artificial bid of a club and would up in six diamonds after the American East-West pair had attempted to jam the works with their interference bids.

West led the king of clubs and continued with a club which declarer ruffed. The fate of the hand now depended on avoiding a trump loser, so Baroni led a spade to the queen and returned the jack of diamonds.

East did well to falsecard with the ten, but Baroni, rejecting the percentage play of the finesse, went up with the ace, caught the king, and thus made the slam.

Explaining his unusual play, Baroni said he reasoned that the American pair at the other table would surely reach the slam also, and that the declarer there would undoubtedly finesse.

He did not want to duplicate the result likely to be scored at the other table because his team was very far behind in the match, and he felt that the only way of regaining lost points was to go against percentage. He realized he might lose 1,470 points by refusing the finesse, but his hope was that West had the singleton king and that he would gain 1,470 points for lily by the inferior percentage play.

Baroni was right on all counts First, he did catch the king and thus scored a plus of 1,370 points at his table. And second, his prediction proved to be eminently correct — the American declarer at the second table did six diamonds and went down one when he took the trump finesse.

I can vouch for this from first-hand knowledge — because I was the declarer at the second table!

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
