THE TABLES have turned—members of the men's division of the Red Cross campaign in Charlottetown will be vying with each other to win the Easter bonnets being offered for their wives by the three ladies' millineries in the city. Left to right in the picture are Keith Johnston who debates whether or not he'll try on the smart model he is admiring, Jean MacLean who represented the CNR division at last night's meeting, while Wilfred Driscoll courageously models a "posh" number, and H.H. Bartlett, city chairman, looks on.

Red Cross Canvassers Vie For Wives' Easter Bonnets

A novel competition described by H.H. Bartlett, general chairman of the Red Cross campaign for Charlottetown, at a "kick off" meeting of division commanders at Red Cross headquarters yesterday afternoon, will give the canvassers an opportunity to procure the finest "bonnet" for their wives this year.

The three leading ladies' millineries in the city are donating three modish chapeaux which are to be drawn for by members of the first team of men to satisfactorily complete the canvassing before next Friday, March 16. The second hat will go to the first division commander to have all his teams finish at their collecting before next Friday, and the third hat will go to the first team in the employees' division to make complete returns within the week.

Rumor has it that when the ladies' teams go out to do the house-to-house canvassing at the end of the month they will be competing for Easter hats for the men-folk.

Reports received last evening from the special names division of the Charlottetown Red Cross campaign, which is being conducted under the co-chairmanship of Fulton Pierce and Cyril Flinn, reveal that $2,709 has been turned in during the past week on the total objective of $5,500 for this section of the set-up. This committee expects to have complete reports from its canvassers early next week.

The general canvass which will get underway on Monday has a quota of $3,500 to achieve, and the women's division has been allotted $2,000 to bring the total objective for the Charlottetown campaign to $11,000.

Home Environment Stressed In Notre Dame H & S Address

Children tend to perpetuate the same environment in which they were brought up, hence, it is of the utmost importance that parents set the example for their children, and train them in good habits from infancy, Sister Mary Henry, CSM, said while addressing the Notre Dame Home and School Association recently.

The meeting, chaired by Richard Hennessey, president, heard the director of the Catholic Social Welfare Bureau speak on teenage guidance, emphasizing the overwhelming influence of the home and the role of church and school in forming youth.

In order that children pass through their teens possessed of the security and moral intergrity which is becoming to youth, the speaker asserted, they need to be shown love and security by their parents from an early age. Children become confused and insecure when they see tension or trouble existing between their parents.

Children should be taught the value of things and trained in the habits of thrift and responsibility, she said. Parent and teacher can work together to assist the child to form good study habits, distinguish right from wrong, and teach them to see their responsibility as members of a Christian society.

Moral education begins and continues in the home. Good teachers show an interest in the individual child, helping him to choose the vocation in which he will do the most good for society and best attain his ultimate goal.

She stated that literature on youth guidance is available for parents.

Sister Mary Henry was introduced by Connie LeClair and thanked by Roy McGillivary.

Mrs. Arthur McGuigan reported on the penny auction and Sister St. Mary Pauline read the minutes of the previous meeting.

Irish Play Said Best Yet

The regular monthly meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society was held in the club rooms on Thursday evening, with president Everett B. Beagan in the chair. The most important business of the evening concerned the play and parade.

This year's play "The Irish Professor" to be staged at Birchwood High School auditorium on Friday and Saturday, March 16 and 17 is reputed to be the best sponsored by the society in many years.

It was reported that the players are ready, and a fine evening's entertainment is in store for those people who are lucky enough to procure tickets.

As usual the society will hold its annual St. Patrick's parade on March 17, marching to St. Dunstan's Basilica for services at 10 a.m., then returning to the club rooms for a short reception.

Before the meeting closed, it was announced that the Society's annual smoker would be held in the club rooms on Tuesday, March 13 at 8 p.m. It is expected there will be a large turnout of members for this annual event.

Another announcement was that the children of both orphanages along with their superiors, would be invited to attend the matinee performance of the St. Patrick's play on Wednesday afternoon, March 14. Transportation for the children was arranged at the meeting.

Upwards of 150 books have been purchased for the Grand Tracadie School library during the last two years, it was revealed in the report of the library convener, submitted at the February meeting of the Grand Tracadie Home and School Association. Also heard were the reports of the 4-H Club leader, and health and recreation convener.

The primary teacher, Sister John of the Cross, showed the type of reading tests given at the end of the mid-term. She explained them in detail and gave a demonstration of teaching methods.

The members voted in favor of a resolution that the Home and School Association go on record as opposing the spread of nuclear weapons to countries not now possessing them.

Critics Irk Councillor

Obviously angered by criticism in the press, through letters to the editor, City Councillor H. E. Hyndman, chairman of the finance committee, said yesterday he would propose that all members of the present Council resign.

He said he would make the suggestion at next Monday's meeting in order to pave the way to a council seat "for all these arm chair strategists who think they can do a better job than we are doing. And where were they Nomination Day? Were they afraid to come out, or did they stay away because their taxes were not paid?"

RESENTS CHARGE

Mr. Hyndman resented a statement that a councillor's work "is confined mainly to the attending of a dozen or more meetings a year."

He maintained, and was supported by other councillors, that he attended between 30 and 40 regular or special meetings of city council each year, and in addition — "mostly on time taken from my own business" — attended a minimum of 150 committee meetings each year.

Meanwhile a group of men from the Magdalen Islands, under the direction of Dr. Mark Arsenault, were reported yesterday to have been very successful in their hunt for seals.

The men are using three helicopters. One large two-rotored machine is being used for transport purposes and two smaller craft for spotting the animals.
