HEAVY COST INVOLVED

U.S. Army Now Seeking Full Fledged Air Force

By BERN PRICKE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army is trying to sell the defence department on the idea of a full-fledged air force of 85,000 men to cost $8,500,000,000 by 1970.

The size and scope of the army behind-the-scenes effort has been one of the best kept secrets in Washington for the last seven months.

Even so, it has produced numerous, some printed, that Defence Secretary McNamara is planning to reorganize the air force into the army. McNamara has denied such intention.

In any event, McNamara has accepted a small part of the army program for an integrated army ground and air force on an experimental basis. The 15,000-man "air assault" division is being formed.

The defence secretary outlined the division concept to the House of Representatives armed services committee Feb. 26.

UPSETS AIR FORCE

Needless to say, the air force activities have made the air force officers who have read the four-volume army proposal.

The concept was put together by a 10-man army board headed by Lt.-Gen. Hamilton Howze. McNamara received the report Aug. 15.

The source said the report was not exactly what McNamara had wanted and gave the background.

Early in 1962 McNamara ordered one of his analysts to consider the vulnerability of ground forces in guerrilla warfare to a solution.

PRESENT TARGETS

The problem was that ground forces are dependent for mobility upon roads and bridges, key targets for a guerrilla attack along with motorized columns.

As troops move inland, they require supplies, which can be intercepted by guerrillas, and supply trains which can be disrupted.

McNamara wanted to know what could be done to lessen the dependency of infantry upon ground lines of communication and supply.

The analyst came up with the idea of an air mobile unit, completely independent of roads and bridges.

It was this suggestion which was given to the Howze board for study and recommendations.

The board, which has continued, not only developed the concept of the "air assault" division but also recommended a complete air force for protection and supply.

RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

The Howze board recommended:

(1) That two new types of completely air mobile units—air assault divisions and air cavalry brigades—be created; (2) that a number of special purpose air force units be created; (3) that army and air cavalry units and corps aviation brigades be formed to give additional reconnaissance and lift capability.

The air assault divisions would be equipped with about 60 helicopters and army-type fixed-wing aircraft.

The air cavalry units and aircraft-mounted rockets would be substituted for heavy artillery and transport aircraft would be substituted for some ground vehicles.

"The air assault division would have a high degree of tactical mobility enabling it to make deep penetrations into enemy territory and to outflank the enemy over inaccessible terrain."

CARROU IS SUPPLIER

McNamara said the various probabilities. He will sometimes make the right play and have it come out wrong, or make the wrong play and have it come out right, but he is surely better off if he makes the right plays instead of the wrong plays. Over the long pull, he will come out better.

Here is a typical case. West leads the game of clubs, which holds and another club, East taking the A-K. East then trumps.

How can he beat the first three tricks. South must now decide whether to take a heart finesse or a diamond finesse. They each have an equal chance to win, and it might seem that one could mentally toss a coin to settle the matter. But actually there is a clear-cut percentage play. The situation is not entirely a matter of luck.

The proper play is to win the trump return, lead a heart to the ace, and ruff a low heart. Then after the drop the play is to ruff the ten of hearts.

It so happens with the actual layout, that the king falls on the ten and no finesse at all is necessary. As a result, the declarer makes four spades. However, it is not this that proves or disproves the matter, but common sense.

He declares plays for a 5-4-3-2-1 hand in either suit, but he has only a 30 percent chance.

As a result, he is not entirely a matter of luck, but rather common sense.
