

The hunter, the trapper, the fisherman, the lumberman and all out-door workers who are exposed to the rigors of either an extremely cold or an extremely hot climate, need to exercise especial vigilance in the care of their health. A trifling derangement of the digestive organs may result in the improper nourishment of the body and a broken down condition of the entire system. With a man in this condition, a slight cold may lead to consumption, or exposure in a warm climate may result in a persistent attack of malaria and liver complaint.

Malaria, liver troubles and consumption are fully treated in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a free paper-covered copy of which may be had by sending 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. These diseases are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. It makes the appetite hearty, the digestion perfect, the liver active and the blood pure. It does not make flabby fat, but solid, muscular flesh, nerve force and vital energy. All medicine dealers sell it.

"In the year of 1892 I came home from a hard day's ride, attending my official business as an officer of my county, in which capacity I have acted eight years," writes Mr. R. D. Hill, of Zanto, Louisiana Co., Va. "I had a chill that night that was the commencement of Malarial Fever. I called in the doctor, but did not get any relief. I called a second doctor, but still got no relief. A third doctor said I had liver disease, and treated me for that, but did me no good. I then commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in connection with Pleasant Pellets. I took three bottles and it did me much good. I had been very restless, could not sleep at night and had no appetite. I had not been able to do anything for eighteen months. I do not think I could possibly have lived if it had not been for the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I think it is a capital medicine for the liver. I can now do as good a day's work as any man. I recommend it to all who are suffering from liver complaint."

CHAPTER XII.
He had been sent by his father ahead of the column to find a camping place for the night.
"Houses, if you can, but water must be nigh at hand, houses or no houses. That's 200 head of stock all told to be watered before we turn in to sleep to-night, boys. You can take Sandy long with you and send him back to pilot us. No use your comin back; better save your horse. You'll have need of him."
Had the gift of prophecy been given to old Eben Martin?

All this Strong had done. Found the tentless cabins of a deserted plantation, found the water course and sent Sandy back to meet and pilot the advancing caravan that represented all the mobilized wealth of Sans Souci.

Alone he had watched the yellow sun sink lower and lower behind the somber crowns of the cypresses that stood knee deep in the dark waters of the bayou, leaving long trailing souvenirs of the dead day in swift fading bannerets of purple and gold. Then darkness, sudden, dense, uplifting.

To fight off a creeping sense of uneasiness, he resolutely turned his thoughts backward. Not very far, only to that moment of time when he had written his note to Mamie Colyer, explaining his sudden call to assist his father in moving Governor Strong's possessions "beyond reach of danger" and telling her of his resolution to enlist. The note had closed a trifle lugubriously.

"Perhaps if I can fetch home an armless sleeve or a broken leg I may become more valuable or less valueless in your eyes than I am now, even though the uniform I propose to don be blue."

Liza had scolded him in a whisper, standing on tiptoe to kiss him goodby. She had called him the hermit pessimist and credited his heavy heartedness to habitual morbidness. She had promised him, with a quaint nod of her small, wise head, to "see that matter of Adrien's wife and boy properly attended to," and she had comforted him immensely concerning Mamie Colyer, saying sapiently:

"We lonely women will have to colonize for self protection. After all of you go away, Seth will be the only white man within a radius of 20 miles. Poor old Seth! I will have to teach Mamie how to weave. Amy is getting on splendidly. Eight yards yesterday. I intend to keep Miss Colyer with us until her father or you come for her. Dear me, what a lot of heroes we are turning off our reels!"

And she had laughed while the others were weeping. Yes, decidedly, Liza was just the sort of woman one wanted about in an emergency. The madam, white and tragic, had stood, as if turned to stone, holding back the trailing tendrils of a Madeira vine with one long, jeweled hand, as she gazed in dry-eyed consternation at the slowly moving column, headed by her father-in-law. Rebecca, rotund, plebeian, sincere, had voiced her misery loudly and shrieked adjurations and counsel after them until they were hidden. Liza alone had stood inscrutably smiling, bright-eyed and composed.

Forward, in reverie, to the long tedious night, when, favored by the darkness, they had launched their fleet of flats and swiftly placed the rushing waters of the Mississippi river between themselves and home. Captained and piloted by four resolute spirits of the dominant race, manned and propelled by sullenly acquiescent slaves, standing confused on the borderland between bondage and liberty, the fleet crossed the swift current and touched the farther bank, reluctantly moving backward, still backward—who knew? Perhaps forever out of reach of the angel of liberty, whose beckoning hand they had discerned as yet but dimly upon the horizon of their future.

Then had come the parting with the governor. When this day, that had just gone down in lurid magnificence, had been young and jocund, the governor had given his parting-injunctions to Overseer Martin and taken leave of them all in his kindly, stately fashion.

"You'll get these fellows out to Lake-ock, Martin, and as soon as you have noused them pitch a corn crop. Never mind about cotton. The place is so infernally far back from anywhere that you couldn't get it to market if you made it. But go in for food crops. Keep them at work feeding themselves until this d—d nonsense has blown over and we'll settle back on the old footing. I am glad Strong is going with you. Don't shove the ox teams too hard."

Then the white haired old aristocrat had ridden away from them as gayly as a troubadour going to do battle for the guerdon of a lady's love, shifting all responsibility for the well being of his slaves upon Eben Martin's well paid shoulders.

How Strong had envied that old man of the privileged class riding away to enroll his name among the aspirants for military renown:

"The old man seems real glad to go," said Eben, looking after the slender, stooping form reflectively, "and yit I'm sho' his heart won't in this thing at the fust of it. I s'pose he feels like he mus' go in fur his country, right or wrong. I reckon it's somethin, like if you or Seth was to git into a quarrel with an outsider and Charlie there was to stan off till he inquired inter the merits of the case. I think it'd be mo' lak my boy Charlie to pitch in and fight for his brothers fust and then talk about it later on. Hey, Charlie!"
