

THE BANNER OF DEATH.

A man cannot straddle the fence when it comes to the question of good health or ill-health. Either he marches under the flag of health or the banner of death. It is the simplest thing in the world to gain and keep health, if men and women only will. For that reason it is almost incredible that men and women will continue to neglect their health even after they must realize that they are marching under the banner of death.

The great majority of diseases have their inception in indigestion, biliousness and impure blood. Among these diseases are deadly consumption, nerve-racking, brain-weakening prostration and exhaustion, body-torturing rheumatism, insanity, breeding neuralgia, emaciating malaria and a manner of disgusting blood and skin diseases. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a cure for all these diseases, if taken in a timely and reasonable time. It is not a cure-all, but cures the diseases mentioned for the reason that they are caused and aggravated by the same disorders. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion perfect, the liver active, the blood pure and builds firm flesh and healthy nerve fiber. Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking something else.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cured me of a severe case of poisoning of the blood," writes Mrs. Selia Ricca, of Coast, Santa Cruz Co., Cal. "Bulla, one after another would break out on my arms, and were very painful. I have tried the badly praised snake-parasites without any benefit whatever, and not until I took the 'Discovery' did I get well. That was two years ago, and I have not had a boil or sore of any kind since."

Accidents occur in every home. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser tells what to do. Send 3¢ one-cent stamps, to cover cost of sending and mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a paper-covered copy. French cloth binding, 50 stamps.

CHAPTER XII.
The long, hot, lonely day burned it self out at last. They dined late at Sans Souci. Her father would not be coming home before bedtime. The cicadas were shrilling in the locust trees behind the cottage. The fragrance of the sweet olive fell heavily upon the air. She seated herself on the bench beneath it with a book in her hand. Empty pretense! She was a foe to pretense of any sort. And yet was she not pretending with herself?

She stood up and broke off an olive branch, threw it away and broke another—she had suddenly grown choicer in the matter—a fourth; at last one that suited her exactly.

"Mrs. Morgan was discreet. No one would ever know. It was only a step, just to the end of the lane, and he away at Sessumport."

Mrs. Morgan was not only discreet, but deaf. She started when the professor's daughter, her face wrapped about with a white cloud, stood suddenly before her, as she sat on her back porch flinging shelled corn to her noisy feathered pensioners. Mamie stooped and laid a small pasteboard box on her knees. The old woman examined it curiously.

"What's this? Martin's name's on the back of it. What am I to do with it?"

"Put it on his table, his bureau, anywhere where he will see it when he comes home. And, Mrs. Morgan, dear good Mrs. Morgan, pray never speak of my bringing it—you know!"

"I know, I know, good child. I ain't been a toothless old hag all my life. He'll get it. Trust me for that."

But Mamie was far beyond reach of these consolatory words. A few steps, just to the end of the lane, and she was back home once more, quivering, flushing, blushing there all alone for the bold, foolish thing she had done.

The crescent moon came slowly up out of the east and found her sitting there under the olive tree, wide eyed, nervous, expectant.

They dined late at Sans Souci. Her father would not be home yet for an hour. The silver moonbeams fell aslant of the crape myrtles by the gate and made a square of brightness about it. Something was moving in the light. The latch was lifted and dropped. Some one was coming up the walk.

There had been no sound of wheels.

there was no sound of crutches. In a soft, frightened voice she called:

"Father!"

"Mamie!"

"Is it you? Oh!"

She drew back close against the wall. Flight was her chief desire, but there was no time for it. He had taken possession of the other end of her bench. He laid his hat aside, and the light that sifted through the olive branches above them showed her a noble head, a pallid face, a pair of burning eyes, a stern, chiseled mouth. He laid an olive branch upon her lap.

"You brought it to me voluntarily, did you not, dear?"

It was the olive branch she had left for him such a little while ago. Denial was impossible, acknowledgment was difficult.

"You—you—how did you get it so soon? I thought you were with the rest of them."

"No. I was at home, making my preparations for departure. The boat is looked for about midnight. You brought me this dear token of good will voluntarily, did you not, Mamie? Don't trifle with me any longer. The strain has lasted a long time. And it has been severer than you fancy. It must be lifted tonight."

"Yes—I took it voluntarily. No one could have made me do it."

She bent her shining eyes on him and made her confession slowly.

"Does it mean all that I want it to mean, Mamie?"

"How much do you want it to mean?"

It was a shy whisper.

"All—everything. I want it to mean indorsement, surrender, forgiveness, love, happiness."

"I think—I think—oh, Strong, Strong, the unconquerable love of my heart constrains me! Yes, it means all that."

He gathered her close to his heaving breast. There was no uttered word of betrothal, but under the sweet olive branches they sat silent, contented, reunited. The moon mounted higher and gazed down upon them more inquisitively. What she saw was a strong man holding a girl's slender hands clasped tenderly between his own. What she heard was a glad, tranquil voice murmuring:

"Thank God! At last I am truly on the winning side!"

THE END.

Fine For Smoking In Street.

At one time if you smoked on the streets of Harrisburg after dark it cost you $1. Back in 1829, when Samuel Pool was president of the town council and J. Montgomery was clerk, it was deemed dangerous to permit people to smoke on the streets after dark, and the council passed this ordinance: "Whereas, the frequent use of cigars in the streets, lanes and alleys of the borough in the evening renders insecure every man's house and stable, and much danger is to be apprehended from fire, therefore be it ordained, etc., that after the due promulgation of this ordinance it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to use or carry along any of the streets, lanes or alleys in this borough a lighted cigar or pipe after sundown under the penalty of $1 for every such offense."—Harrisburg Telegraph.

Cows With Earrings.

A cow is the last creature one would expect to see with earrings, yet every cow in Belgium has got to wear them now. The director general of agriculture has issued a regulation that all animals of the bovine species are to wear earrings as soon as they have attained the age of 3 months.

This is a hygienic measure, intended to prevent the introduction into Belgium of animals suffering from tuberculosis.

Breeders are to be obliged to keep an exact account of all animals raised by them, and the ring (on which is engraved a number) is fastened in the animal's ear for the purpose of preventing or helping to prevent the substitution of one animal for another.

Careful.

It is related of a certain clergyman in Edinburgh that he was so careful of his quotations and so fearful of the charge of plagiarism that once, in addressing the Deity, he surprised the congregation by saying, "And thou knowest, dear Lord, that to quote a writer in a late number of The Quarterly Review," etc.

Though the French are the greatest mushroom eaters in the world, cases of poisoning very rarely occur owing to the fact that almost all the mushrooms eaten are raised.

DR. A. W. CHASE SENDING FREE ADVICE TO THE SICK.

REV. J. N. VANATTER, OF ALBION, WIS., WRITES A LETTER ON DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Sufferers are at Liberty to Correspond with the Above Address and will Obtain Full Particulars Regarding the Great Cure.

HERE IS WHAT HE SAYS:

Gentlemen,—My wife was most terribly afflicted with protruding piles, and contemplated a surgical operation. A friend of ours recommended the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and less than one box effected a complete cure. We were so pleased with the ointment that I tried it myself, as I have been troubled with an unsightly skin affliction which covered the lower part of my face.

For 25 years I suffered untold agony, and was treated by the best medical skill in the United States. I consider Dr. Chase's Ointment worth its weight in gold for piles and skin disease.

Dr. Chase's large-size recipe book, cloth-bound, sent to any address on receipt of 50 cents, by addressing Dr. Chase's Company, Toronto or Buffalo, N. Y.
