of the holidays was left to negotiation.

2. Awarded three weeks vacation with pay after 15 years' service at an estimated cost of $2,650,000. The maximum now is two weeks after five years. The unions asked three after 15 years and four after 25 years.

3. Turned down demands for paid sick leave and higher overtime pay for Sunday work. The unions asked 18 days a year sick leave, and time-and-a-half for Sunday work when it is a regular work day and double time when it is normally a day off.

Effective date is Jan. 1, 1955. Under the terms of reference, contracts cannot run beyond Dec. 31, 1955.

CHAPPELL DISAPPOINTED—President H. A. Chappell of the 34,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (C.B.R.E.), Canada's largest transport union, said here that the contract terms are "extremely disappointing" but that the findings will be of long-range benefit to rail workers in that the chief justice has shown how the railways are "hogtied" in getting revenues.

"He has brought matter into the open and put it on the doorstep of the government," president Chappell said.

In Montreal, officials of the C.N.R. and C.P.R. declined comment. Frank H. Hall, chairman of the unions' general negotiating committee, was not available.

While Chief Justice Sloan's findings on the grain rates go beyond any submitted publicly by a government appointee in many years, it is known that federal officials long have been studying the question of a subsidy against the rates.

The Canadian Press reported this Sept. 22. The federal experts, it was reported, have found the two big railways lose between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000 a year on the Crow's Nest rate traffic.

Coronation Display To Be Shown Here

Local District Nurses Ass'n Regular Meeting

The regular meeting of the Charlottetown District of the Association of Nurses of P.E.I. was held last night at Red Cross House.

Mrs. Ruth Ross, president of the district, chaired the meeting.

During the business session plans were made to consider revision of the district by-laws. A committee was appointed to organize a refresher course in the near future.

The programme which followed included a role playing dramatization to explain the educational requirements of applicants to schools of nursing and the interpretation of registration as outlined by the Nurses' Act.

A presentation of "Scattered Showers" was given by Little Theatre Guild. This play depicted how children reflect the attitude and behavior of their parents. Following buzz sessions, a lively discussion followed under the capable leadership of Miss Mona Clay.

The pomp and ceremony of the Coronation and its meaning will be brought closer home to the people of Prince Edward Island through the display in the Queen Charlotte High School next month of the items of specific interest used in the centuries-old ceremony when Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth was crowned in famed Westminster Abbey.

Pictured above are the principal inanimate objects which have so long played an important part in the crowning of the ruling heads of Empire. The entire display is contained in a square 18-1/2 feet by 18-1/2 feet as shown, and protected properly by a corded railing.

In the exhibition of the Coronation robes and regalia, made available to the people of this country by the National Gallery of Canada, and in this Province by the Department of the Provincial Secretary, are many items of keen interest. They include the Purple Robe of State, the Supertunica, the Duke of Edinburgh's Robe, the Canopy, the Faldstool, the Homage Bible, replicas of the Regalia and various chairs, hangings, carpets, table coverings and so forth.

The showing to be held in the High School Library, has been arranged through the co-operation of the School Board of the City of Charlottetown. While a nominal fee has been set for admission to cover the costs of shipment and installation school children in organized groups, such as classroom gatherings, will be admitted free.

It is felt by authorities that though the exhibition of these historic items will be of interest to all Canadians, they should be of particular interest to school children and all those who feel that the ties of Crown and Commonwealth should be stressed and strengthened at all times.

What may prove of great interest to many is that the Supertunica (a cloth of gold robe worn by Her Majesty during part of the ceremony) is pictured above incased in a glass surrounding to protect it.

The entire exhibition will be on display in the High School from December 13 to December 15 inclusive.

Tribute Paid In Supreme Court To Late Mr. Rogers

At the opening of a special session of the Supreme Court yesterday morning, the following tribute was paid by Justice George J. Tweedy to the late Mr. R. H. Rogers:

"Before proceeding with the regular business of the court today, I wish to pause and pay tribute to the memory of a highly respected one-time official of this court for some twenty years—the late Reginald Heber Rogers, whose sudden passing away took place on Saturday last.

"The late Mr. Rogers was a man of many parts.

"First and foremost, he was a brilliant scholar and a clear thinker, one who harboured no evil thoughts but who saw and believed the best in every man. It was a joy and privilege to visit in the sanctity of his home and converse with him.

"He was a distinguished member of the Bar, not only of his native province but also of the Bar of British Columbia at a time when it was thrilling to even talk about the West. Many were the tales the late Mr. Rogers related about his experiences in the West.

"He was also Superintendent of Education for this province for a number of years, and played a leading part in furthering the education of our youth.

"In the courts, where perhaps he was best known in later years, he was a most honoured, trustworthy and respected official—one who adorned the position with his many capabilities.

"In the realm of fraternal and welfare organizations, as well as his church, he played a leading role.

"Many will be the tributes paid to this faithful public servant, but it can all be summed up in this sentence: Reginald Heber Rogers was a truly Christian gentleman and a scholar.

"One who never turned his back. Never doubted clouds would break. Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph. Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, sleep to wake."

"The court pays this very humble tribute to the memory of one of Prince Edward Island's most distinguished sons and tenders his family its most sincere sympathy."

Let's keep Christmas

We call friends "hard to shop for"—yet who does not need love, consideration, a helping hand? We "can't feel the Christmas spirit"—yet who cannot rejoice at Jesus' coming?

In December Reader's Digest, Peter Marshall (subject of A Man Called Peter) tells how we can keep Christmas' glory in our homes—and in our hearts.

Describes NATO Defence Headquarters Activities in Address At Rotary

"By and large the German people are living very peacefully and feel that if we win them over to our side in the new pact, we will have a wonderful ally," Group Captain Swetman, Commanding Officer of the R. C. A. F. Station at Summerside, speaking to Rotarians at their luncheon meeting in the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday.

Group Capt. Swetman, who spent two and a half years at Nato Headquarters at Founienbleau, France, and one year in England as part of a four year stretch with the organization, told an interesting story of the work being done at the three main bases of defence headquarters.

"General Eisenhower made a magnificent job as Supreme Headquarters Allied Commander in Europe and the work there continues to be carried out on a high plane of efficiency by the representatives of more than a dozen nations," Capt. Swetman said. The chief difficulty encountered is that of language. Although English is the accepted medium of exchange of views, all are encouraged to learn at least one language other than their own.

In addition to the main headquarters at Founienbleau, there are the other major centers of joint activity between Oslo in the north and Naples in the South, where American, English, Danish, Dutch, Greek, French, Norwegian and other nationalities are represented by Naval, Army and Air Force units. "While Sweden is not in the pact," Capt. Swetman said, "there is no doubt of the way they would act in case of invasion and their well equipped Air Force is as good as the best."

The Canadian Air Brigade headquarters at Soest is outstanding for its equipment which has been described as "fabulous". This is chiefly due to a desire on the part of Canada to compensate the men for being so far away from home, and to bring to them, to some extent, the atmosphere of Canada.

"Canada has now three wings in France and one additional is being presently moved there. We have two bases in France and two in Germany. There are no better bases in the world than the Can-

Vishinsky Dies

Malenkov, just as he was the mouthpiece of the Stalin regime, relaying Soviet policy in speeches laced with fiery invective.

He was free in his way of scattering violent charges against Western statesmen. He compared President Truman with Hitler in one speech. He blasted his adversaries on all sides as "warmongers."

Andrei Yanarlevitch Vishinsky, though he sometimes talked out of turn, bore a sort of charmed life. Born Dec. 10, 1883 in Odessa in the Ukraine, he received the good middle-class education which cost many another dearly in his time.

Vishinsky joined the revolutionary Social Democratic party and was arrested in Baku during the 1905 revolution for organizing a railway strike. But later Vishinsky joined the "Menshevik" or minority wing of the Social Democrats, led by Trotsky. That was a fatal step for many another after Stalin took over and began purging his enemies. Vishinsky not only escaped, but presided over the purge.

BECOMES BOLSHEVIK

Schooled in the law schools of Baku and Kiev, Vishinsky's abilities were not recognized until, sometime after he was accepted as a penitent into the Bolsheviki—or majority—wing of the party in 1920. By then it was the Communist party, led by V. I. Lenin.

He remained an obscure bureaucrat for some years, occupied with a dull job in the food supply commissariat.

His brilliance came through for him and after associating himself with legal work and writing, he became attorney-general of the Russian Soviet Federated Soviet Republic, biggest of the 16 Soviet republics.

That promotion, plus his prominence as a professor of law in Moscow University, catapulted him to fame in the mid-1930s. After serving as commissar of justice and deputy U.S.S.R. state prosecutor, he rose to prosecutor in time for the purge trials of 1936, 1937 and 1938 when Stalin was furiously killing off his enemies, real and suspected.

RISES QUICKLY

By 1940 Vishinsky had risen to first deputy foreign commissar under V. M. Molotov. In 1949 Molotov was whisked up to the rarefied atmosphere of the Kremlin and relinquished the title of foreign minister. It fell to Vishinsky and remained his until Stalin died.

When Stalin died in 1953, Molotov resumed the title of foreign minister, and Vishinsky once again became his first deputy, meanwhile retaining his posts as member of the Communist party central committee and head of the UN delegation.

On his 70th birthday last December he received the Order of Lenin, highest award of the Soviet system.

But in the last four years his health was declining. In 1950 he had to recuperate at a Czechoslovak spa. His health was so bad before the opening of the current UN session that there had been some doubt about his return, but he was on hand as usual in September.

Vishinsky is survived by his wife and a daughter, Zena, who has been an attorney and a Moscow University law professor.
