

The Queen at the Tomb of Princess Alice.

The Darmstadt correspondent of the London Times writes as follows:—So deeply affected was the Queen by the ideas naturally associated with the ceremony of the forenoon that it was deemed doubtful by her attendants whether she would have the courage to carry out the other part of her purpose in coming here; but, to-morrow being fixed for the return of the Royal company to Baden, Her Majesty summoned up fortitude enough for the bitter trial in store. Accompanied by Princess Beatrice and the Grand Duke, her son-in-law, the Queen drove in an open carriage and four, preceded by two outriders, to the Rosehohe, the summer residence of Princess Charles, in a corner of the grounds of which stands the mausoleum, the mournful object of Her Majesty's pilgrimage. Naturally disliking to encounter inquisitive eyes, the Queen took the most unfrequented route to this sorrowful "hill of roses." Beyond the murmur of the town below, though within sight of the quaint and pointed Gothic gables clustering round the moated oldcastle of the Hessian Dukes, is the gently rising knoll crowned by the mausoleum wherein repose the ashes of the Princess Alice and two of her children. Wandering about the neatly-trimmed flower plots that front the tomb of the Princess, the visitor imagines the mausoleum to be nothing more than a sheltering garden-house and ventures in, to find, however, the floor occupied by three sarcophagi, shrouded with crimson-colored velvet pall and covered with floral crosses, drooping palm branches, and wreaths of violet, white, and yellow immortelles. "A mark of tenderest love and affection from her broken hearted mother, Victoria," "A mark of affectionate love from Louise," "A mark of love and affection from Alexandra," "In affectionate remembrance from Marie," "A mark of tenderest devotion from Beatrice," are but a few of the English inscriptions appended to these floral emblems of immortality; while conspicuous among all, at the head of the largest coffin, reposes a massive wreath of purple grampian heather, being "A token of love from Balmoral," brought away by the Grand Duke in October, 1879, after his sorrowing sojourn at Her Majesty's Highland home. Into this sunny sepulchre the Queen with her companions entered, and affectionately placed two more wreaths and a floral cross upon the already heaped up central bier. Then kneeling, Her Majesty remained for several minutes by the side of her departed daughter in deep devotion. Her Majesty's visit to the mausoleum lasted in all about a quarter of an hour.

John Locke, the English philosopher, was a favorite with many of the great noblemen of his age. They liked his robust sense and enjoyed even the sharp reproofs in which he occasionally indulged. On one occasion he had been invited to meet a select party at Lord Ashley's. When he came they were playing at cards, and continued absorbed in the game for two or three hours. For some time Locke looked on, and began to write diligently in a blank book taken from his pocket. At length they asked him what he was writing. He answered,—My lords, I am improving myself the best I can in your company; for having impatiently waited this hour of being present at such a meeting of the wise men and great wits of the age, I thought I could not do better than write down your conversation, and here I have in substance all that has passed this hour or two." The noble lords were ashamed at the written record of their frivolous talk, that they at once stopped card-playing and began the discussion of an important subject. Thomas Carlyle has uttered even a more pungent reproach of idle talk: "If we can permit God Almighty," he says, "to write down our conversation, thinking it good enough for him, any poor Boswell need not scruple to work his will of it."—Youth's Companion.

Trees, Seeds and Plants.

PERSONS who cultivate the soil soon find out that it pays them to get the best Seeds, Trees and Plants. Now, many who sell and some who buy know nothing about the conditions upon which they grow. Some seed are nearly useless after the first year; others, again, whose vitality is strong, are good, if properly kept, for many years. As we have been in the Nursery Seed and Market Garden business we think we know something about the nature of Seeds, and would not knowingly sell to another what we would not use in our own Garden. Our increasingly large yearly sales seem to point to the fact that our Seeds, &c., are giving satisfaction. Our mailing accommodations are so good that we can send 4 lbs. or less of seeds in one parcel to any Post Office for one cent per four oz., thus bringing our Seeds to your own Post Office. Trees, Shrubs and Plants as usual. Our card is on all packages of seeds sold by us; this may prevent imposition. Our stock is for sale in the MARKET HOUSE, Charlottetown, and at POWNAL.
