

Braves Even Series By Stopping Yankees 4-2

By JACK HAND
NEW YORK (AP)—New York Yankees traded away in 1951, squared the world series for Milwaukee Thursday by beating his old mates 4-2 in the second game at Yankee Stadium.

LEW BURDETTE

Avenge the opening-day defeat of Warren Spahn, his roommate, the fidgety 30-year-old right-hander held the Yanks to seven hits. Time after time he squirmed out of difficulty to bring the Braves home to Milwaukee for Saturday's third game all even with the favored New Yorkers.

On Aug. 29, 1951, Burdette and $50,000 went to the Braves for Johnny Sain. This triumphant return Thursday before 65,202 cheering fans was his greatest day.

FIDGETY TYPE

The nervous pitcher, who tugs at his cap, brushes his face, massages the ball and blows on his hand between throws, didn't do it alone, of course. But he chipped in with four fielding assists, one a vital throw of a weak roller by Harry Simpson that helped him escape his worst jam in the sixth.

Wes Covington, the Braves' hitting star with a .500 series average, cracked the game-winning single as early as the fourth inning. With the score tied at 2-2, Joe Adcock and Andy Pafko opened the sixth inning with singles.

Manager Fred Haney sent up Covington with instructions to move them along with a sacrifice bunt. Wes fouled the first pitch, looked at a ball and fouled another. With two strikes, the bunt sign went off.

COSTLY ERROR

Covington dunked a single into short left that brought Adcock home with the tie-breaking run. When Enos Slaughter threw to third base in trying to get Pafko, who was zooming toward the bag, the ball got away from rookie Tony Kubek and rolled to the Braves' dugout.

Pafko scored and Covington wound up on third on the first series error by the 20-year-old rookie.

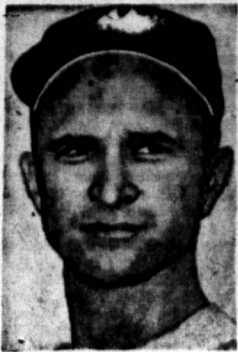

Each team had scored in the second and they traded homers in the third as the score went 2-2. Johnny Logan's fly ball into the fourth row of the lower stands in left was counter-balanced by Hank Bauer's towering drive deep into the same lower left field seats.

Bobby Shantz, Stengel's choice to try to match Whitey Ford's southpaw feats of Wednesday, had the stands humming when he struck out Red Schoendienst, Logan and Eddie Mathews in the first inning.

MANTLE MISJUDGES BALL

Hank Aaron drove a long high fly to deep center to start the second inning. Mickey Mantle, apparently still hothotheaded by his bad left leg, drifted back slowly. He seemed to have misjudged the ball and made a final lunge.

after the game for Milwaukee for the third contest Saturday. Bob Turley (13-6), a 27-year-old right-handed speedballer, will be throwing for the Yankees in that game and Bob Buhl (18-7), another fast-balling right-hander, will pitch for Milwaukee.

BOBBY SHANTZ

Burdette, Covington, Aaron and Logan all contributed fine defensive plays to ensure the Braves' victory.

Covington ran hard to his left for a one-handed stab of Shantz's fly when trouble threatened in the second. One Yankee run already was in and there were men on first and second when Covington, supposedly a poor fielder, raced over to make the catch.

Aaron sped to the clay running track in faraway right centre, about 407 feet from the plate, to grab Simpson's home run bit in the fourth.

TWO ON IN NINTH

Burdette's big play was the pick up and off balance throw on Simpson in the sixth.

Logan slid on his stomach to stop a single by pinch-hitter Elston Howard in the ninth. He got the ball, then threw from a prone position to try for a force at second but his throw dribbled away.

Logan then forced pinch runner Bobby Richardson at second for the final out after fielding Bauer's roller.

Burdette was walking that tight wire until the very final out for both Kubek and Howard had singled in the ninth, putting the potential winning run at the plate in the person of Bauer. Logan took care of him.

Stengel Says He'll Probably Use Bob Turley On Saturday

By TED SMITS
NEW YORK (AP)—With the world series all even, manager Casey Stengel says he'll probably pitch Bob Turley against Milwaukee Braves Saturday in Milwaukee.

Turley, a righthanded fireballer, has a 13-6 record for this year.

The New York Yankees manager was quick to compliment pitcher Lew Burdette for the Braves' men that tied the series 1-1 Thursday.

"He pitched a darned good game," he said. "We didn't have hardly any chances."

There was a postmortem on the triple that Hank Aaron hit to start the second. Centrefielder Mickey Mantle at first stood still and then ran back and the ball went over his head.

"Mickey didn't handle it," said Stengel.

"It carried better than I thought," said Mickey. "I should have caught it. When he first hit it I thought I would catch it easy."

PITCHING DID IT
Was the key play of the game Wes Covington's hit in the fourth that started two runs on the way home and spelled the end of Bobby Shantz, the Yankee starter?

"No," said Stengel. "The key play was the pitching."

Then he went on to analyze the situation.

Joe Adcock opened the inning with a hit to left field, and Andy Pafko's single in almost the same place sent him to third. Then Covington singled over shortstop and Pafko raced home.

Enos Slaughter fielded the ball and threw to Tony Kubek at third base as Pafko slid in. The ball went past Kubek and caromed off the Braves' dugout with Pafko scoring and Covington reaching third. Kubek was charged with an error.

"I looked like Slaughter was gonna throw home instead of to third," said Stengel. "It looked like a better chance at home."

PRAISE COVINGTON
Shantz, the Yankee starter, "looked good in the first when he struck out the side but after that he didn't look so good," Stengel opined.

The Yankees themselves, rather glum in defeat, were warm in praise of Covington.

"That catch of his in the second maybe cost us two runs," said Yogi Berra. "And his hit in the fourth started the real trouble."

The catch was spectacular. With two on base and two out, Shantz lined a hard drive to left that Covington caught backhanded on the run.

Sees Covington's Catch As Turning Point For The Braves

By WILL GRIMSLEY
NEW YORK (AP)—Milwaukee manager Fred Haney termed Wes Covington's sparkling backhanded catch of Bobby Shantz' blast to left field in the second inning as the turning point of the second world series game, won by the Braves 4-2 over New York Yankees Thursday.

"If Wes hadn't got that ball they might have made two more runs," the Braves skipper said.

Rookie Tony Kubek was on second and Jerry Coleman was on first, with one run in and two out, when Shantz, the Yankees' pin-sized pitcher, sent a Lew Burdette offering spinning toward the left field stands.

Covington, hitting and fielding star of the series so far, made a great running catch, stabbing the ball backhanded on the run.

"It would have been a home run if I hadn't caught it," Covington said.

EARNED TO FIELD
The rookie acknowledged that he had never been considered a good defensive man.

"So in the spring I concentrated on my fielding and everybody said I learned how to field and forgot how to hit."

Covington shared the hero's limelight in the happy Milwaukee dressing room with Lew Burdette, who tamed the Yankees' murderers' row of Hank Bauer, Gil McDougald, Mickey Mantle and Yogi Berra.

The last three didn't get a hit and Bauer's lone blow was his ponderous home run into the left field stands in the third inning.

"I threw Hank a sidearm fast ball—the same pitch I struck him out with in the first inning," Burdette said. "But you can bet I didn't give him the same thing in the ninth with the tying runs on base. I fed him a curve."

Bauer forced Bobby Richardson at second for the final out of the game.

NOT SO TOUGH
Burdette said he didn't think the Yankees were any tougher than four or five of the National League teams he faced during the season.

Haney praised Burdette's pitching performance and said he never thought of removing him. "If Bauer had got on base, I

Curry & Vachon Win Over Baillergeon And Hughes

A packed Sports Arena last night saw some very nice wrestling, with lots of action keeping the fans entertained.

The tag-team match between Bull Curry and his partner Maurice Vachon taking on Len Hughes and Tony Baillergeon was the roughest of the night. Chairs flew every which way and the wrestlers spent almost as much time outside the ring as inside the squared circle.

Curry and Vachon won the match after almost an hour of hard struggling.

The match opened with Len Hughes taking on Maurice Vachon. Hughes got the worst of the meeting and soon was helpless along the ropes. He managed to tag Baillergeon who put a stop to the rough antics of Curry and Vachon. As time wore on Tony was beginning to get roughed up a little bit and called on Hughes for help. After Hughes came in the ring, the top rope came loose. Curry took advantage of this and joined his partner Vachon in beating Baillergeon and Hughes over the head with the steel buckle on the end of the rope. Referee Fred Hayter did his best to stop the illegal tactics of Curry and Vachon but to no avail.

Baillergeon was pounded to the mat where he was pinned by Vachon much to the dislike of the fans.

In the second fall Baillergeon got his revenge by pinning Vachon after a few minutes in the ring. During the match Curry and Len Hughes put on quite an exhibition outside the ring.

During the second fall they tangled for about two minutes with Hughes disposing of Curry and then hurrying back inside the ring to avoid being counted out.

In the third fall Hughes and Curry again went at it outside the ropes. This time Hughes picked up a chair and let Curry have it over the head. Curry then picked up another chair and handed it to Vachon who hurled it across the ring at Tony Baillergeon then went outside the ring and Vachon and Curry jumped on Len Hughes. After a very short time Curry held Hughes down for the count of three and the match was over.

The midgets provided the comedy on the wrestling card. Lord Littlebrook and Tito Infante defeated the much disliked team of Fuzzy Cupid and Pee Wee James.

Pee Wee James got things rolling in the first fall by pinning Tito Infante after a few minutes. Lord Littlebrook and Tito Infante were battered around the ring for a couple of minutes. Referee Fred Hayter got the worst of the encounter with the midgets when Lord Littlebrook jumped on his back after hayter had not allowed him in the ring when Infante was in trouble.

The second fall was much like the first, the only difference was that Infante pinned James down for the count.

Lord Littlebrook and Fuzzy Cupid got into the act in the final fall with Littlebrook coming out the winner by pinning Fuzzy for the count. Cupid with his long hair drew a lot of laughter from the crowd as he entered the ring for the first time as did Pee Wee James. But the laughter soon disappeared in the boos of the crowd at Fuzzy and Pee Wee used illegal tactics during most of the match.
