

A VOTERS OPINION.

Sir—I think it was a very shabby trick on the part of the new Liberals to turn down Mr. Rogers after calling him the nomination which he accepted and then passing him over for Mr. George E. Hughes. It was currently reported a short time ago that Mr. Rogers had incurred the wrath of some of the Liberals for not remaining on the Island until after the Dominion election, and now they have carried their threat into effect. That he had to go away on account of Mrs. Rogers' health made no difference with them—been turned down. This is his reward for fidelity and work for his party in the past. And a man who, a very short time ago was willing to oppose Dr. Douglas in the opposition interest in the West River District, and still later was "on the fence", so to speak, a short time previous to the Dominion Election, has got the nomination in his place. It is not very long ago that this same man denounced the Liberal party to the writer in no unmeasured terms—this lightning change in Mr. Hughes' political opinion is now easily accounted for. And this is the man whom the new Liberals have turned down Mr. Rogers for. I ask Mr. Rogers' friends if he is deserving of their confidence and support? I think not.

I ask every honest elector, Liberal and Conservative, to compare the two tickets now in the field, Messrs. Paton and Jenkins and Messrs. Hughes and Whear, and decide which he would like to see the interests of the city placed in the hands of, apart from the record of the Government, which is deserving of the severest condemnation of every honest elector. It would appear to me to be an easy matter to decide.

PERSONAL.

It is reported that Leo III has decided to personally celebrate the last mass of the century with the utmost solemnity at midnight on December 31.

Lord Brooke, son of the Earl and Countess of Warwick, who has had a year's service in the 7th King's Royal Rifle Corps (Barnet Militia), and has done duty in South Africa on the staff of General French, has been given a commission in the Household Cavalry.

Henceforth the daughter of Princess Henry of Battenberg will be known as Princess Victoria Eugene, instead of the Princess Victoria, as formerly. The little Princess, who is just thirteen, is, it is said, likely to inherit more than a name from the Empress Eugene.

The Prince of Wales, whose physician ordered him to give up tobacco about a year ago, is now free to smoke once more, and is credited with the remark that he gets from his cigar all the pleasure he had when he smoked his first one as a boy.

Since the time, eighteen years ago, when Sir Frederick Cavendish was murdered in Phoenix Park, Dublin, Lady Cavendish has never appeared in public without wearing the deepest mourning. Her thin, careworn face is known by many women who are engaged in charitable work, which is now Lady Cavendish's chief concern.

The Princess of Wales is a lover of animals, and visitors to Sandringham always enjoy a visit with her to the kennels to see her canine friends, and to the pigeons, which come clustering around her to be fed. Princess Henry of Battenberg has a fancy for Angora rabbits and from the long woolly fur of her pets she has made many useful and pretty articles. The Duchess of Newcastle has a special love for her large wolfhounds.
