[WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER.]
No Cross, No Crown.
No cross, no crown; bear thou these words in warning,
Thou soul that walkest on life's weary road; Remember if thou heavenly gain would merit, Thou first in sorrowing toil must bear the load.
No cross, no crown, think not in worldly pleasures
Thy life to pass, and at the last to win The crown ungained by aught, but daily struggle,
The soul's reward that constant strives with sin.
No cross, no crown, look not for joys immortal,
If thou of sorrows earthly hast not share, If thou the cross bear not in gentle patience, Thou canst not hope the victor's crown to wear.
And not alone to heaven's future glories Do these four words with meaning fraught apply,
No prize on earth is ever deemed worth winning,
When, to succeed, we do not need to try.
Hold out some gift to man with no condition Attached to make the prize one hard to gain, Secured by naught but asking, how do mortals
Look on the pleasure gained devoid of pain?
We hold them cheap, such honors, but when glories Beam bright before our eyes, gained but by toil,
How envied they become, our each endeavor To win them be throughout our life a turmoil.
And, being won, do they not seem the dearer, Do they not make our souls more satisfied, Than cheaply-purchased fame—if such ex-isteth?
For fortunes gates ne'er ope to us untried.
Do history's pages name one soul that ever, Within the roll of fame has found a place, Who strove not for that honor, oft enduring Opinion's scorn, and enmity of race?
No cross, no crown, has ever been the watchword
Of men who fought and died for truth and right,
The cross of hate and fierce resistance bearing,
At last to gain the victor's crowning bright.
But think not that to men of noble story Are noble deeds confined, and highest gain, No, some in life's most lowly paths are plodding,
To whose sad ears but comes the same refrain.
Of sorrow, suffering, and an endless burden, From day to day, yet those brave souls hope on;
Each morn they rise, take up their cross in patience,
And look for rest, life and its troubles gone.
The world's great teeming millions tread the highway,
Each day of bitter, never-ending strife, While sorrow, sin and suffering, fierce temptations, Rend each poor heart, each soul with passion rite.
Dark tempests rage around the soul sin-laden, Deep sorrows greet her in her onward way, Why should these crosses be imposed upon her,
Were no reward bestowed some future day.
Faint heart that neath life's burden sighs in anguish, Look up and bravely tread the toilsome road,— Remember, soul, the future holds the promise
Of rich reward, if thou wilt bear the load.
No cross, no crown, thou mother lowly kneeling
Beside thy darling's bed of dying pain, Grieve not that baby fingers cease their clinging,
Accept the cross, the heavenly crown to
gain.
No cross, no crown, lone orphan cease thy wailing, Beside that new-made mound, thy mother's grave;
Look up with trust, grieve not as being faithless,
God but recalled what for a time He gave.
No cross, no crown, grieve not though land and ocean, Stretch wide between thy heart's best care and thee,
Remember that the crown of love is patience,
In time thy just reward shall come to thee.
No cross, no crown, within thy heart's recesses Bear thou these words through life and life's dark way, Fret not when nights deep shadows fall around thee,
They are but tokens of eternal day.
No cross, no crown, can joy be worth the winning,
That for it sorrow never must be borne; How frail the fleeting pleasures of a moment,
That vanish and but leave us more forlorn?
No cross, no crown, may this be ere my watchword,
While I upon life's highway toil along;
And though affliction rend my heart, still always
Upon my lips be naught but joyous song.
And when the shadows deepen dark around me,
When mercy sheds upon my woes to frown, Still from my anguished heart shall come as ever,
With quenchless faith, oh Lord, No Cross,
No Crown.
CECIL.

A Revolution in Printing.
An invention has been perfected in Minneapolis which bids fair to revolutionize the present methods of newspaper composition. It is called the Electro-matrix. The machine works with a keyboard; on a key being struck an electrical connection is closed and a letter corresponding to the key is punched into the matrix. The operation can be performed with all the rapidity of type writing, so that an expert operator could set at least 12,000 ems an hour. There are about 5,400 in a column of ordinary news matter in the Evening Mail, so that with the aid of this new invention a single expert operator could set up all the composition necessary for a newspaper of this size in less than seven hours, a work which at present employs a large staff of compositors. Among the direct benefits to be derived from the success of this invention are the following:
The cost of composition will be reduced at least three-fourths, and there will be no distributing.
No more wear and tear on type, no new dress required, and yet there is always a new dress.
A reduction of no inconsiderable amount in space now occupied by composition room.
Capital now locked up in the body type will be released.
If the invention proves to be a success it will thus effect an enormous saving in the cost of producing a newspaper. A Minneapolis company has been formed with a capital of $1,000,000 to manufacture the machines.—Halifax Mail.

The Brightness of a Wife.

A Detroit man boasts of the sharp wits of his wife, and, from the following story, seems to have good reasons for so doing: They had been talking of the sharp games played on innocent people by sharp men, when Green looked up and said: "Gentlemen, I don't brag about my wife being sharper than a razor, but I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll write a note and sign it with my own hand and ask her to deliver my Sunday suit to bearer for repair. You may send it up to the house and I'll bet you $5 she'll be too sharp to let the clothes go." "We'll take that bet!" called two or three voices, and there being five of them they chipped in a dollar apiece. The note was written and signed and despatched by a messenger boy. In half an hour he returned, empty-handed as to clothes, but having a note which read: "Come off the perch! All the clothes you have in the world are on your back!" "Gentlemen," said the winner, as he pocketed his five, "let me recommend it to you as something which always wins, and as I must meet a man at three o'clock, I will now bid you good day."

Divorce in Persia.

In Persia, as in Turkey, if a husband wishes a divorce from his wife all he has to do is to order her out of the house. As a check upon the too free use of this arbitrary proceeding, however, the Persians have constituted a very curious and ingenious custom. While the Mohammedan laws make it so easy for a husband to put away his wife, it secures to her all her own property. As a precaution against divorce, then, the husband in the marriage contract is usually required to promise a considerable sum of money as a wedding gift to his bride. This money is not forthcoming at the wedding, nor expected, but it is placed to the wife's credit as a debt owed to her by her husband. As in case of divorce, this money would have to be paid over, the amount is usually made so large that it is virtually beyond the husband's means.
In that case, divorce to him would mean financial ruin; and, as a Persian's pocket is the most susceptible part about him, it follows that there is no divorce. Owing to this ingenious arrangement, although a mere angry order to begone is a legal divorce, there are fewer divorces in Persia than in the United States.

The Emperor Frederick wears a scarfpin with a history. Remarking on one occasion that the person with whom he was conversing was observing the pin with some curiosity, he pulled it out of his scarf and said:—"This little silver coin is one of three which were unearthed in an old Roman grave in the presence of my three boys. I had the three coins mounted as pins for them as memorials of the occasion, and when my little Waldemar died I took possession of his and have worn it ever since." Prince Waldemar, who died in March, 1879 was a singularly lovable and bright boy, 12 years old at the time, and was the favorite child of "Unser Fritz" and his wife, and they bitterly and deeply mourned his premature death.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain; and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind. [April 1, '88.

Who says that advertising does not pay?
A Chicago burglar overlooked eighty dollars in a bureau drawer, and the papers so announced. He returned the next night, and not only secured it, but a suit of clothes besides.

A couple were married at Atchison, Kan., the other day, who had nothing in the world but 10 cents with which to pay their fare across the bridge which spans the Missouri at that place.
