INJURED DUCK RELEASED. Mr. Johnnie White, game warden for Kings County, placed an injured black duck at Harvey Moore's sanctuary yesterday, where it showed every sign of being happy to be back again amid familiar surroundings, and upon being set free on the bank immediately flew to the pond to join its fellows. The duck was found injured about two months ago by Mr. Wally MacDonald, Georgetown, who took it home and cared for it while it recovered from its injuries. Yesterday he notified the game warden that the duck was fully recovered and could be moved to the sanctuary at Milltown Cross.

W.C.T.U. NOTES

North and South Dakota lawmakers have asked Congress to stop alcohol advertising in newspapers, magazines, on radio or television.

In a formal resolution, North Dakota's House of Representatives said:

"The liquor industry is currently procuring a great deal of space in newspapers and magazines and on radio and television time, devoted to advertising and promoting the consumption of alcoholic beverages.

"Such advertising will certainly increase the consumption of alcoholic beverages and will especially influence the youth of our nation glamorizing the use of such beverages."

The resolution urged Congress to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages in newspapers, magazines, on radio or television.

A similar resolution was adopted by the North Dakota Senate, mentioning radio, television, nationally circulated publications and other interstate media.

Montague Legion Ladies Auxiliary

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, Montague branch, was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Byron Stewart. The president, Mrs. Thomas Clair, presided. The meeting opened in regular form by observing one minute silence. Roll call was answered by eighteen members. The minutes of the last meeting and the correspondence were read by Mrs. Jessie Shaw, who also read the financial report which showed a substantial balance on hand.

Mrs. Hazel McCarron reported for the sick committee. Several sick members had been remembered with flowers, treats and cards, and it was noted that two members, Mrs. Stan Pearson and Mrs. Nell Holley, were in hospital.

Miss Florrie Beaton, Mrs. Clair and Mrs. John Gaudet gave an interesting resume of the recent meeting of the disaster organization in Montague, at which Miss Beaton was appointed convener of the committee in charge of providing clothing for disaster victims. It was decided that the auxiliary would begin immediately to gather used clothes and blankets to have in readiness in case of emergency, and the members volunteered to knit children's socks and mittens and squares for an Afghan.

New business included plans for sponsoring a number of card parties to be held in February. At the close of the meeting, the members enjoyed a social half hour featuring the singing of old favorite Scotch songs, with Mrs. Atwood MacDonald as organ accompanist, after which lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Judge, Summerside, were recent visitors to Montague where they attended the funeral of Little Jane Inman.

Mr. Albert Murphy was a business visitor to Summerside this week.

THOUGHTS FOR OUR TIME

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan

(Copyright)

RESPECT FOR AUTHORITY DOESN'T RESTRICT FREEDOM

There is nothing to which the modern mind is more sensitive than the least breath of censorship. People who will not co-operate with each other even to prevent the loss of life, in less exciting causes will gladly organize to defend what they consider to be their freedom.

It is a sad commentary on our age that one of the sure ways of publicizing a bad motion picture is to get it condemned by any authority at all, civil or religious. Then everyone will want to see it, and a certain number really will waste their money on it, and perhaps their peace of mind as well.

Such a wide reaction could not take place if it were not ultimately based on an instinctive yearning for human nature. Man's instinctive independence, his knowledge that he must, in the last analysis, choose for himself and accept the consequences of his choice, is closely associated with his dignity as a human person.

It is perhaps because in no period in history this great glory of man's nature, his personal freedom, has been so overwhelmed by an enemy on all sides, that we so instinctively oppose the restraint that seems to lie in censorship.

NOT A CONTRADICTION

This may seem to be a contradiction, that in the age when political and other liberties seem to be most surely achieved, when tolerance is greater than most of us can remember it to have been, we should say man's freedom is more curbed than ever before. But history for a moment: When his rights were man's upbringing, his education, his opportunities for employment, his sources of information, almost the whole design of his life, more completely in other hands than his own?

In former periods, when children had to learn many things at home, there was a great possibility of diversity in individual cases; now, more and more parents leave a larger educational role to the school, and there the patterns are more and more decided from above by boards of education. A child becomes a statistic, above or below average; he is tested according to the latest tests, and told what kind of jobs he is fitted for.

This is not to malign our educational system at all, or psychological tests, or even statistics; all of these things have their value. Especially in view of the number of people who have to be educated today, such methods are really necessary. But they do shift the emphasis away from the individual child, with his differences from everyone else, and with this wonderful ability to choose for himself.

HOW WIDE A CHOICE

When the child grows up and is faced with finding work, economic necessity adds to the general pressure. In spite of the fact that there are supposed to be some 30,000 different jobs available, most people are lucky to have a choice of three or four.

Or consider sources of information: there was probably never an age in which so much news was available so quickly to everyone; yet a regular examination of almost any newspaper or any news magazine will show that inevitably, most of the decisions about what a reader will know are not made by the reader, but by the editor, or sometimes by the publisher, or even indirectly by the advertisers.

I think there is more and more evidence in our newspapers nowadays of honest criticism; it is certainly possible now for some people who write for the papers really to say what they think, but one cannot help noticing that when that does happen it seems different fare than we are used to.

Once again, this is natural: it goes with a two-party political system, that one paper should give one point of view, and another, the opposite; but when this begins to influence the presentation of facts, there is a real limitation of this basic freedom to see a thing clearly and decide for oneself.

Or take the case mentioned above, of a bad motion picture, condemned by responsible authorities. Is the kind of person who insists on going to such a picture really free, or is he a slave of his "liberal" ideas? Actually he is only another statistic, attracted inevitably by a certain kind of publicity and a certain kind of advertising.

These are delicate matters, of course, but I think it is clear enough, that a respect for authority is not necessarily a limitation either of freedom or of wisdom.

DREW CALLS

on a Canadian Press dispatch Friday which said the government on Nov. 3 last signed a contract with Israel to supply $30,000 worth of artillery ammunition.

On Sept. 27, more than a month before this contract was signed, Egyptian Premier Nasser announced that Communist Czechoslovakia had agreed to supply military equipment to Egypt.

Earlier this week, Mr. Pearson said the Egyptian order for 15 C-130 military transports — three were shipped Monday from Halifax — "early last summer" before the recent "disturbing developments" in the Middle East.

Before that, in reply, to Mr. Stewart, he said he knew of no shipments of Canadian aircraft to Egypt or orders for any.

When Mr. Stewart asked whether the Harvards could be armed, Mr. Pearson said he didn't see how a gun could be mounted on a trainer.

After defence department photographs appeared showing a Harvard firing rockets and carrying machine-guns, Mr. Pearson said the trainer "apparently" could be armed.

Friday, Mr. Drew said: "Our point is that if (the government) does not choose to give us the information we should have and that a debate of ... kind

APPROVED BY CABINET

During the daily question period, John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) asked whether arms exports are decided by the cabinet.

Mr. St. Laurent said approval or rejection of foreign arms orders is discussed by cabinet "in the light of the situation and the repercussions it might have upon the situation with respect to peace in the world."

Mr. Diefenbaker then asked when the Egyptian order for Harvards was approved by the cabinet.

"It was some time in June of last year," Mr. St. Laurent replied.

Mr. Diefenbaker then asked: "How is it that when the question was asked at the beginning of the session none of the ministers seemed to know anything about it? How is it that they knew nothing about it?"

There was no reply from the government.

BRISTOL

We regret to learn of the death last week in the P.E.I. Hospital after an illness of several weeks of Mrs. William W. MacDonald, formerly Mrs. Emma McSwain.

Mr. John J. Perry, was a business visitor to the city on Saturday.

Miss Mabel O'Brien, spent the weekend in the city following a Teacher's Federation meeting on Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. William MacDonald, has returned to her home after two weeks in the Charlottetown Hospital with an attack of pneumonia.

Miss Mabel MacDonald, returned on Tuesday morning from a holiday trip to Toronto, and Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eldershaw, were in the city on Friday on business.

The grade eleven students of the new high school here held the first debate of the new year in the Parish Hall on Friday 13th. Subject: resolved that N.V. has many bad effects on children. The subject was upheld by Miss Ursula Aylward, Miss Ann McAdam, and Mrs. Juani MacDonald, while opposed were Louis McGuire, Donald MacDonald and Richard McLean. The judges' decision in favour of the pro side giving the girls a wide margin of points over the boys.

Judges for the debate were Frank Dunn, Mabel O'Brien, and Sydney Anderson. The debate and meeting was presided over by Miss Yvonne Eldershaw, Rev. Eric Robbin, and the judges spoke a few words of congratulation on the debating.

The weekly card party in the parish hall was well attended last week and the prize winners were Mrs. Gordon Hooper, and Mr. Bill Finlayson.

LAC Keith Eldershaw, has returned to his duties with the R. C. A. F. station at Bagotville, Quebec, after spending his leave at

WHIM ROAD

The first whist party of the season, sponsored by the Whim Road W.I., was held at the home of Mrs. Janette MacDonald on Friday evening. The winners for the evening were: Ladies, Miss Mary Farquharson; and Men's, Mr. George O'Harey. Mr. Buddy MacKinnon was the winner of the beautifully decorated cake.

In spite of the extremely cold weather preceding Christmas, a large number of parents and friends attended the Whim Road School Christmas Concert. The children, under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. Russell MacBeth, did their parts remarkably well, and did justice to the time and preparation spent in making the concert the success it proved to be. Mr. Webb Nicholson capably acted as chairman for the evening. During the intermissions there was a sale of fudge by the Junior Red Cross members. At the conclusion of the concert, Santa's appearance, especially the children as he distributed gifts from the beautifully decorated tree. He was assisted by a number of helpers. On his departure he wished everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.
