ELLEN'S DIARY

Not Sweeter Songs, But Ears To Hear The Present

Smartly, the winter days spend. In new dawns, bright on the fields, that summon folks to rise and come again to the round that is theirs; in nights when we come to a window or door to look out on the quiet loveliness of the valley, and bid then the day a farewell. Always with some regret. For no matter its joys, or its fret and care, it will never return to us again. The date, perhaps, but nevermore this day that has been.

As days go, this was in a sense quite ordinary, yet looking back on its hours we know we could have asked for no better. Continued privileges were ours: we had eyes to see with, ears to hear, hands to work, feet to go... a hearthfire, a sheltering roof. And our own to come to us.

Yes, eyes: to look out to see the sun on the old fields we call ours, where the snow lies in a light coverlet, which caught the light and shadow of the day, winsomely there; to see the farming continue: see the machines go busily to the work required of them: see a tree, and trees, sway and fall to the tune of the power-saw in the woodland across the fields; see a dog accompany happily a pair of lads and a girl down to a field-pond in the low of the valley to skate; see sunset... and a star . . . and moonbeams weaving lovely patterns now on the snow.

Ears: to hear the familiar sounds of our day: a bantam's shrill crow, a heifer's tender low to her first-born; a dog's bark, the childrens voices. A friendly knock on the door, the fire's winter-tune. Not much admittedly, but in part, or altogether, valued by us as "riches untold." Hands? Yes, to attend to the small tasks, the humble duties of the farmwife: to bake and cook and spread a table, to clean and tidy the rooms, and do those over-and- over items, the little things and seemingly inconsequential which however contribute so much to make of a house a comfortable home.

Feet- to go! Only those who once active have been suddenly denied this right, because of illness or accident or other misery, can appreciate what a desired thing it is to be able to move about at will. Even to walk across a kitchen and draw a drink at the tap, is to know that it is a direct gift of Heaven. In summer, to walk to the yard to love some blossom there, or as far as the front meadow to see the clover bloom, is to be happy indeed.

So, privileged we were today to be able to come to the old paths of our cares. And now with the week's work complete, and with nice anticipation of the day ahead which is given to inspire and refresh mind and body before we shall take up the duties of a new week, we would beg:

"Not more of light, I ask this night
But eyes to see what is;
Not sweeter songs, but ears to hear
The present melodies;
Not more of strength, but how to use
The power that I possess;
Not more of love but skill to turn
A frown to a caress;
Not more of joy, but how to feel
Its kindly presence near.
To give to others, all I have,
Of courage and of cheer.

No other gifts, dear Lord, I ask,
But only sense to see
How best these precious gifts to use,
Thou hast bestowed on me."

National Council Presents Brief

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP)—The National Council of Women presented its annual brief to the prime minister Thursday.

Although Parliament was dissolved Wednesday Mrs. Saul Hayes, president of the 700,000 group, said the council still wanted to meet Mr. Diefenbaker and other cabinet members.

"We knew nothing (in the brief) was going to get done but we wanted to honor our appointment," Mrs. Hayes said following an hour-long meeting with five cabinet ministers and a five-minute meeting with Mr. Diefenbaker.

Mrs. Hayes said the ministers' reaction was one of interest. The nine-woman delegation met with Revenue Minister Hugh John Flemming, Immigration Minister Bell, Postmaster-General Ellen Fairclough, Finance Minister Nowlan and Health Minister Monteith.

Just as the meeting was about to break up, the prime minister slipped away from a Progressive Conservative caucus and joined the women for five minutes.

He complimented the women on their carefully - directed thinking.

Mrs. Hayes said later next year's annual brief would probably include this year's items.

WANT WOMEN ON BBG

In its brief, the council asked the federal government to appoint at least four women to the 15-member Board of Broadcast Governors.

At present the only woman member is Dr. Mabel Connell of Prince Albert, Sask. The council wants one of the women to be from rural Canada, one to be French-speaking and one to be full-time. The board has three full-time members.

It asked the government to refrain from reappointing any male members to the board until at least four women had been appointed.

Other requests included legislation which would require loan companies and banks to state clearly on each contract how much they charge for a loan in terms of annual interest.

The brief urged the government to remove an 11-per-cent sales tax on margarine. It said the tax was unjust to Canadian consumers and particularly to those with lower incomes.

Fine Pointed Toe Is On Way Out

MONTREAL (CP)—The fine pointed toe in women's shoes is on the way out in Canada, officials of the Shoe Information Bureau of Canada said Thursday.

Representatives of leading Canadian shoe manufacturers said at a press conference the oval "finger tip" point and square toes are replacing the elongated pointed toe in spring and summer styles for 1963.

However, Quebec women are clinging to the pointed toe more than women in other parts of Canada.

The most popular color and leather combination for women's shoes in the forthcoming season will be black patent leather. Soft leathers in bone, mid-browns, blues and reds will follow in popularity.

The opened up look still is evident, with openings at the sides, slingpumps, and more perforated and mesh styles.

Heels will continue to be fine because of the unbreakable steel used in heels. Stacked heels will have their biggest season this spring, ranging in height from one half inch to two inches.
