

Battle With Brigands.

A DESPERATE ENCOUNTER BETWEEN OUTLAWS AND SOLDIERS

The town of San Juan, fifteen miles north of Colega, Mex., on the Mexican National Railroad, was the scene a few nights ago of a bloody battle between a band of 12 brigands, under the leadership of the desperado outlaw Antonio Gallardo, and a company of government rurales of the place.

The bandits rode into the town about 9 o'clock and made a raid on the general store of Ricardo Vendoza. They secured several hundred dollars in cash, driving the proprietor, clerks and about 20 customers into the street at the muzzle of their pistols. The rurales were given the alarm at the presence of the brigands, and as the latter emerged from the store and were in the act of mounting their horses, a fusillade was opened upon them by the soldiers.

Gallardo and two other members of the desperate band fell at the first volley, all three fatally wounded. The nine other brigands returned the fire and a pitched battle then ensued, the outlaws fighting their way through the ranks of the rurales. Six of them escaped and three were captured alive. Four of the rurales were seriously wounded. The escaped bandits retained possession of the stolen money.

This is the same band who a few days ago stole $2,000 at Loria, a town a few miles north of San Juan. They committed that robbery by breaking into the office of E. Enabio Gonzalez, a wealthy man from that place. They killed a watchman and two employees in that raid. The money was to have been used by Mr. Gonzalez in paying off the employees of his manufactory. The rendezvous of the brigands it thought to be near Guanajuato.

The Kalmucks of Astrakan, a roving people numbering about 150,000 souls, have at last been freed from serfdom. When the other Russian serfs were freed in 1861 it was considered dangerous to extend this privilege to these people, lest their wildness would lead to its abuse.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while cutting their teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best-known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. 1yr
