VISITS CITY HALL

Mrs. J. Corbell of Montreal, who has been on a business trip to this province, is shown signing in the Visitors' Book at City Hall. Mayor E. C. Johnstone looks on as another name is added to the interesting list.

Charlottetown Has A Most Attractive Visitor

If the city is full of wolf calls, please do not be too much surprised, it is just that gorgeous Joan Corbell is in town. Joan is here in connection with the advertising campaign of the Pepsi-Cola Company. As a young girl Joan attended Outremont High School in Montreal. Incidentally this school must be getting a corner on the market for clever, attractive young Canadian women. Denys Parent, who recently visited Charlottetown as a public relations person for a tea company, also was an Outremont High School grad. But if these young Montreal women come to us, we send to Montreal from the Queen Charlotte High School and Victoria, Prince Edward Island's Ruth Boswell.

The career part of the life of Joan Corbell includes TV screens, homemaker shows, special events, and business conventions. Also she models for the leading Montreal stores. With all this busy life one feels instinctively that Joan is truly a home person and has the interest of her home at heart. Tangible evidence of this is the fact that she stipulated in her contract that she would not have to be away from home more than three days at a time. Joan has travelled extensively throughout Canada. She is beautifully bilingual and her interest ranges from skiing to history. With the aura of glamour surrounding this young woman, perhaps the greatest admiration came from the high school students whom she visited at the Polio Rehabilitation Centre.

This young crowd are true appraisers and they were most enthusiastic about the sincerity of the visitor. Certainly as she talked about her little girls and her home, Joan Corbell was an endearing young Canadian woman.

ELIEN'S DIARY

With A Million Dollars What Do You Really Buy?

This week? How we number off the weeks, slipping back the pearl-dust beads with regret, each one so precious, each and all so good!

"If I had a million dollars, I'd buy...just everything" one of the children said today with some wishfulness...We were making mince pies at the time, limited to a pair in the commercial mix we used, which though delicious too, always creates in us a yearning for that wintered once upon a time, in a plump crock on the (cellar) dairy shelf.

"Could you buy everything?" we chuckled.

"Oh yes!" he replied.

"Supposing the pup died?" we commented "could you buy him alive?"

"No-o" he admitted.

"Can we buy the Nell-mare now?"

"No."

"And if this house burnt-or the barn, could we buy them back?"

"No. But with a million dollars we could build better."

"But they wouldn't be the same, would they? Not so nice for us as the old ones?"

"No."

"Could you with your million buy a sunset on a rainy day? Or the new moon if you wished to see it to wish on? Or grass on meadow-flowers? Or the song-birds...can you buy a robin to sing in the Spring?"

"I wouldn't have to wish on the moon then" he laughed. No, I know," he nodded, "money won't buy everything. At the same time, it would be pretty handy to have a million, wouldn't it?" he smiled.

Today, sun sparkled on the snow of the winter fields. And "What a nice Winter we're having!" we said.

It was a sister-in-law, a tiny fair woman with a golden voice that has given much pleasure and comfort to numbers down along the years who gave us this Saturday's thought.

She is one who has kindly ways of remembering folks, understanding their likings and needs. We have heard her "weigh in the balance" too, even a hopeless character always to find some virtue or goodness about him.

"It's true he isn't much good for himself, but he's pleasant. I know if anything were to happen to him, I should miss him," she said. Her two sons, nice lads and both university graduates, are gone from the home now, leaving the place strangely empty.

"These verses" she wrote "are from a scrapbook of my (maternal) grandfather's, which I inherited when the home was no more. The author's name was not included."

"Setting The Table For Two."

"They are left alone in the dear old home, After so many years When home was full of frolic and fun, Of childhood laughter and tears. They are left alone, they two once more, Beginning life over again, Just as they did in the day of yore

Before they were nine or ten. And the table is set for two these days The children went one by one, Away from home on their separate ways When childhood days were done. How healthily hungry they used to be! What romping they used to do! And mother, for weeping can hardly see To set the table for two.

They used to gather around the fire While some one would read aloud, But whether at study or work or play 'Twas a loving and merry crowd. And now there are two that gather there At evening to read or sew, And it seems almost too much to bear When they think of the long ago.

Ah, well-ah well, 'tis the way of the world Children stay but a little while And then into other scenes are whirled, Where other homes beguile: But it matters not how far they roam Their hearts are fond and true, And there's never a home like the dear old home Where the table is set for two." Until Monday ---Diary --- Good-night....
