Poetry.

DEATH'S FINAL CONQUEST!

James Shirley, was the author of the following beatiful lines, descended from a family of good name, who possessed ancient manors in Sassex and Warwickshire. He was born in 1596 in the parish of St. Mary, Woolnoth, London, was educated at Merchant Tailors' school, and from thence went to St. John's College, Oxford, but having removed to Cambridge, graduated there, entered into orders, and obtained a living in, or near St. Alban's. In the literary world he is considered the "last minstrel" of the early English stage, for in him expired, what may be properly termed the school of Shakspeare. As a dramatist, Shirley bears evident indications of being the dernier rejeton "of a great but almost exhausted line of writers. It is the decline, though still the serene and beautiful decline, of a glorious day. The royal race submits with tranquil dignity to its deposition, but the sceptre is passing into other hands.

It is next to impossible to doubt that it was by the fall, if not by the death of Charles the First, that the mind of the royalist poet was solemnized to the creation of those imperishable stanzas, which first appeared in his "contention of Ajax and Ulysses." Oliver Cromwell is said on the recital of them, to have been seized with great terror, and agitation of mind, as stated by Touch in his notes on Walton's Lives.

Frequently as this noble dirge has been quoted it will bear repetition, and last as long as English poetry is known and valued:—

The glories of our mortal state
Are shadows, not substantial things;
There is no armour against fate;
Death lays his icy hand on Kings:
Sceptre and crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal made
With the poor crooked scythe and spade.

Some men with swords may reap the field,
And plant fresh laurels where they will;
But their strong nerves at last must yield,
They tame but one another still:
Early or late,
They stoop to fate!
And must give up their murmuring breath,
When they, pale captives, creep to death.

The garlands wither on your brow!
Then boast no more your mighty deeds;
Upon death's purple altar now,
See where the victor victim bleeds:
Your heads must come
To the cold tomb,
Only the actions of the just
Smell sweet, and blossom in their dust!"

Few poets have moralized more beautifully on death than Shirley, his own was a tragic termination to a life of vicissitude. He and his second wife, Frances, were burnt out of their dwelling in the memorable fire of London. They fled to St. Giles' in the field, and broken down with fright, exposure, and distress at their losses, the unhappy old couple died in one day, and were buried in one grave in the church-yard of that parish.

A WORD TO OLD MAIDS AND BACHELORS.

"Men should not marry," it is commonly said, "unless they can, not only maintain for themselves the social position to which they have been accustomed, but extend the benefits of that position to their wives and children. A woman who marries is entitled to be kept in the same rank and comfort in which she was reared." We entirely disavow these doctrines. It should be the aim of every married couple to make their own fortune. No son and daughter who become man and wife, are entitled to rely on their patrimony, but should willingly commence life at a lower step in the social ladder than that occupied by their parents, so that they may have the merit and happiness of rising, if possible, to the top. Imagine the case of an aged couple, who by great perseverance acquired possession of immense wealth, and are living in a style of ease and splendour which is no more than the reward of their long life of industry. Will any body say, that the children of such "old folk" should live in the same grandeur as their parents: The idea is preposterous. They have no right to such luxury, they have done nothing to deserve it, and if their parents are honest in dividing their property among them, they can have no means of supporting it. Yet marriages are contracted on the principle, that the married couple shall be able to keep up the rank to which they have been accustomed under the paternal roof. It is such notions as this—engendered by Malthusian philosophers, and fostered by lazy pride—that are filling our country with "poor old maids," with coquettish young ladies with nice, cigar-smoking, good-for-nothing young men.—North British Mail.

Snow at New Orleans.—The good people of New Orleans were visited on the 18th December with the rare novelty of a fall of snow, which is thus noted in the Picayune of that city:

We actually had a light fall of snow yesterday afternoon about a quarter to four o'clock. It was like a dream—almost as quickly gone as come; but it served as a topic for wonder and chit-chat throughout the city. Some of the children down town, black and white, who had never before seen the article, were frightened half out of their wits by its appearance.

THE GREAT POLAR OCEAN.

At the last meeting of the Geographical Society, Lieut. Osborne, a member of one of the British Arctic expeditions, argued, at some length in favour of the support of the existence of a great Polar Ocean. He said that in Wellington channel, he had observed immense numbers of whales running out from under the ice, a proof that they had been to water and come to water. He further said that there were almost constant flights of ducks and geese, from the northward, another proof of water in that direction, since these birds found their food only in such water. He added that it was his deliberate opinion, from observations made on the spot, that whales passed up Wellington Channel into a northern sea. In referance to the abundance of animal life, in the latitude of this supposed Polar Sea, he remarked that while, on the southern side of Lancaster Sound, he never saw game enough to keep his dog, Melville Island, one hundred and fifty miles to the northward, abounded in deer and musk oxen. It was thus clear, he continued that animal life did not depend on latitude, but increased, if any thing, after passing the seventieth degree. Moreover, while in Baffin's Bay, the tide made for the southward, coming from the Atlantic, in Barrow's Straits it made for the northward, which could only be explained on the hypothesis of a sea in that direction. All this seems to us proof of a great Polar Ocean.

A German paper speaks of a plan which we have not seen elsewhere announced, of a house which is about to be built in England for the benefit of persons suffering under complaints of the lungs. Mr. Paxton, the architect of the Crystal Palace, it states, has formed the following plan: A large space of ground is to be covered after the manner of the Crystal Palace in which a temperature is to be maintained by artificial means, similar to that of Southern climates, such as Nice, Madeira, Egypt and the like. In this space Southern plants will be placed, and the illusion be kept up by artificial means, perspective, &c. The great open part will furnish walks, places of amusement, baths, reading rooms, and similar establishments, which will be connected with small chambers, in which the same temperature will be kept up. These will be used as lodging rooms by the patients.

A couple of young men who attended a cock fight at Hartford Con., on Saturday evening, got into a fight themselves after the fowls had done their best, and one of them had his ear and the other his thumb bitten off.

Newfoundland.—Efforts are being made in New York, with a good prospect of success, to enlist the sympathy of capitalists and merchants in the project of connecting Newfoundland with Nova Scotia and the United States, by extending the line of telegraph from St. John's to Cape Ray, and thence 48 miles across the Gulf of St. Lawrence, by the same process recently adopted in crossing the Straits between England and France. It is said that the Newfoundland government is willing to extend large pecuniary aid and afford every necessary facility for the accomplishment of this great enterprise.

The English government has sent a large military force to Connaught, Ireland, for the purpose of protecting the converts to Protestantism, who were severely treated by the Catholics.
