

Letter from Bennett, the Murderer of Hon. Geo. Brown.

Toronto, July 23.—Bennett last evening hauded to Governor Green the following letter: Toronto jail, July 22nd 1880:—"A warning to young men"—The sands of life are continually crumbling beneath our feet, and we are drawing towards that awful moment which marks the boundary between time and eternity. In general, we know not the day nor the hour, but when by man the day, the hour and the place are fixed, then the mortal must seriously reflect on the past, the present, and the dark and mysterious that lies before him. It is appointed for man once to die and then the judgment. I must soon present myself before the bar of judgment, which is just, to give an account of my stewardship. Now, I behold the earth, which at one time I would have been sorry to leave. Now I see how are the charms of the world, how powerful its attractions, how dreadful its allurements, how sweet its honey appears, though it has the sourness of vinegar. In the days of my childhood I was brought up in the Catholic faith, and though for years I have, to my grief, wandered like a stray sheep from the precepts, wise counsels and frequently the sacraments of the church, yet I wish to die in her bosom, and my greatest consolation at the last moment will be to be fortified by the sacraments which Christ has left in his church. Too soon, alas, I lost my best friends, my dear parents, who would no doubt have brought me up in the fear and love of God, and in the practice of approaching the sacraments. The result was that I soon fell an easy victim of evil associates. Among my new companions I learned to regard the practice of going to confession an intolerable slavery, but in abandoning its restraining influence I fell into a slavery of a different kind, the slavery of passion and sin, and my career downwards was very rapid. Now that I am on the brink of eternity, how vain and wicked do the false maxims of bad companions appear to me. Those who boast of liberty, of free thought, and who would banish away the thought of God, of a future life and man's superiority, what do they offer instead to heal the wounds of society, to heal the wounds of a sinful soul, and make it resolve on a better course? Nothing but false maxims and the pleasure of sin without restraint or remorse. If I had attended my religious duties I would not be here to-day, occupying my present unenviable position. The concession that would have saved me from the tyranny of passion, would have broken up the occasion and prevented the habit of sin to become a second nature. I was taught all this in my boyhood. I was made fully aware that one who approaches the sacraments must resolve on leading a good Christian life. I abandoned the sacraments, and now I am reaping the bitter fruit. I courted the vain pleasures of life and became acquainted with sin. I went about from day to day with a weight of trouble on my heart, that was eating my life away. Through my late misfortunes I shaped myself alone. I felt that I had been grievously wronged by man, and every day some additional cause would arise to fan the flames already making a hell within my breast. If before this feeling obtained control of me I had unburdened myself in the tribunal of penance of the load of sin and trouble which I was unable to bear alone, and obtained the counsels of one in whom I could confide things would be different with me now. Instead of doing this, I brooded over it alone and endeavored to drown my feelings in the current of human pleasures, and without such counsel to aid me or the grace of God to guide me, I came to grief. I have no motive in appearing before the Judge of the living and the dead with a lie upon my lips. It would serve no purpose here and would confine me hereafter with a full consciousness of the position in which I am placed. I say I never intended to injure Mr. Brown: he never deserved it from me, and I am innocent of the crime for which I am doomed to die. I have enough besides that to atone for to the justice of God. I am resigned to my doom and would offer now if I had a thousand lives, in atonement for my sin. I freely and from my heart and soul forgive my enemies, and all who have injured me, as I hope that God in His great mercy will forgive me, in my offences against Him. The sun which rises in the horizon hastens his curse and pursues the night and the light, solicits the light of day; the rivers flow on to the ocean, as if the ocean which is their centre ought to give them repose; the winter deprives the trees of their foliage in order to give us a lesson on death. I am no longer attached to earth by any tie or affection; I have resigned all my desires in the hands of God. The sentiments of the world, which are now dead in me, have taught me a lesson of death. The rivers flow into the sea;

the seasons of the year follow one another in invariable order. Great God, I must render an account. My judgment makes me fear, but Thy infinite mercy makes me hope. I cast myself into Thy arms and implore pardon for me. Great God have mercy on my soul.
