Friday Afternoon Concerts Spark Ottawa Shopping Mall

By BRENDA LARGE
OTTAWA (CP)—Nobody has ever called Ottawa a swinging city, but once a week on its usually staid three-block shopping mall on Sparks Street a small but lively segment of the city's population swings.
The swinging happenings are a series of Friday afternoon concerts organized by a local music store, The Treble Clef.
Although the store's owner, Harvey Glatt, 32, says he has had different types of music featured in the concerts, he doesn't deny that the biggest crowds have come to hear rock 'n' roll and folk music played by local musicians.
"Teen-agers are the best supporters of Canadian talent," says Mr. Glatt. "They're more aware of what's going on in the Canadian music field than any other age group."
The teen-agers who flock to the concerts, staged on an outdoor platform between O'Connor and Bank streets, are a colorful sight.
Dressed in the latest teen fashions—miniskirts, stovepipe slacks, flowered vests and ties—and with both sexes wearing their hair longer than it has been for years, they crowd around the platform to applaud the bands.
A few perform the latest dances to the ear-shattering music, which resounds up and down the mall. It can even be heard in the dignified surroundings of Parliament Hill.
Mr. Glatt says he started the concerts about the end of June "just to create a little bit of activity on the mall."
He also admits that he hoped the concerts would attract more customers to his record shop and reports that they have been successful on all counts.
"It has been paying off. We hope to keep it up until the end of September at least."
So far, there's just been one hitch.
"Some merchants have complained to me that they don't like the noise or the type of people the music attracts."
"I've been telling them that it's only a trial thing and if the objections get too strong I suppose we'll have to stop."
To overcome some of these objections, Mr. Glatt says he has tried hard to have different types of music—not just rock 'n' roll—played on Fridays.
So far, there have been an organist playing quiet popular selections, a Dixieland jazz group, a folk-singing group, a country and western band and a group playing West Indian and Latin American music.

Chou En-lai Seen Firm As Third Man In China

By VERGIL BERGER
PEKING (Reuters)—Premier Chou En-lai appeared firmly established as No. 3 in the Chinese hierarchy, despite speculation outside China this week that his power in the Communist party has been sharply reduced.
This foreign speculation was based on a brief New China news agency report about Chou and another leader, Kang Sheng, meeting an Australian Communist Party delegation at Peking Airport.
The report failed to describe Chou En-lai as a party vice-chairman and instead referred to both men as members of the politburo's standing committee.

Most observers here said they think the wording of the report was intended to draw attention to the promotion of Kang Sheng. To do this, it had to stress his and Chou's politburo role and in the politburo standing committee, everyone is referred to as just a member.
Nevertheless, recent changes still not formally announced in the ranking of some of the party's top leaders have left it unclear who actually holds certain party posts.
No new official list of the central committee and its policy-making politburo was published after last month's plenary session of the central committee, the first in four years.
Since this session, Lin Piao, the defence minister, now considered to rank second to Chairman Mao Tse-tung, is the only leader to have been described in the party organ, the Peking People's Daily, as a vice-chairman.

In the last official list, in 1958, Lin Piao was one of five vice-chairmen. The others were Head of State Liu Shao-chi, Premier Chou En-lai, Parliamentary Chairman Chu Teh, and Vice-Premier Chen Yun.

These five, with Mao and Secretary-General Teng Hsiao-ping, constituted the powerful standing committee of the politburo, the party's top inner cabinet.
Observers don't rule out the possibility that there is now only one vice-chairman of the central committee, Lin Piao.

But even if this is so, Chou's place in the party hierarchy remains the same, despite the loss of a title. He has been given more publicity during the last month than anyone except Mao and Lin Piao.

Tao Chu, the party's new propaganda chief, has leaped into prominence in recent months and now is being placed fourth in press lists of the leadership. Observers said it is certain he has become a politburo member and is probably on the standing committee.

South African Prime Minister Keeps Control Of Police Dept.

By ADAM KELLET-LONG
CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—South Africa's new prime minister, Balthazar Vorster, has announced he will retain temporary control of the police in view of threats to the country's internal security.
Making his first appearance in Parliament since his election Tuesday, as successor to the assassinated Hendrik Verwoerd, Vorster said he feels he owes it to the country to assume responsibility for security until South Africa is in calmer waters.

Vorster, determinedly anti-Communist justice minister for the last five years, is the architect of South Africa's tough security laws. He appointed a close friend, Petrus Pelsler, to succeed him as justice minister but retained the police portfolio created in March.
Pelsler also assumed responsibility for prisons and emergency planning—the latter new portfolio necessary because of an emergency planning bill now before Parliament.

S. L. Muller became deputy minister of justice, police, and prisons. Vorster said Muller will handle most of the tasks connected with the police portfolio.
Vorster also appointed a senior judge, Justice Jacques van Wyk, a former judge in the World Court at the Hague, to investigate all aspects of the Verwoerd assassination and report to the cabinet, irrespective of who might be affected.

Verwoerd was stabbed to death Sept. 6 by a temporary parliamentary messenger with many names and passports, of dubious racial origin, and with an alleged background of mental instability.
Despite an earlier statement by Vorster that the assassination appeared to be the work of only one man, there have been suggestions of sinister background influences.
Vorster acknowledged Wednesday there have been many reports and rumors about the killing, but he did not go into details.

Vorster appeared in Parliament Wednesday soon after being sworn in as prime minister by President Charles Swart, and was greeted with loud cheers from government members.

He took his seat on the front bench where Verwoerd was stabbed, paying tribute to his predecessor and assuring the House he will protect the rights and privileges of legislators and the rights of minorities.

Foreign Control Is Threat

CALGARY (CP)—Foreign control of key Canadian industries should be cut to one-third by the end of the century, former finance minister Walter Gordon says.

And when this reduction is made, he said, "there should be a similar reduction in the power and influence of foreign-directed trade unions."

Mr. Gordon told a Calgary Young Liberals Banquet that if Liberals do not guard Canada's economic sovereignty, it will be too late for them—or any other party—"to do anything very much for Canada."
He said a policy of gradual recovery, rather than takeover, should be used to regain full control of the Canadian economy. Foreign investment should be in a form that could be paid off later.

Mr. Gordon's suggestions came in a six-point policy stand he urged Liberals to take to their national convention in Ottawa next month.

Other proposals included aid to the aged, increased unemployment insurance benefits and some form of insurance for workers displaced by automation, including living allowances while they are retrained.

He also urged reduction of trade tariff barriers, endorsement of the co-operative movement and reforms of political campaign financing, including charging some expenses to the treasury.
The former minister said the government should insist foreign investment in Canadian resources and business be associated with Canadian capital, to ensure a measure of domestic control.
