Official Mourning For Pope Ended On Sunday

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—Nine days of official mourning for the late Pope Pius XII ended Sunday with a magnificent, candle-lit service in St. Peter's Basilica. Envoys of 53 nations, dressed in evening clothes, and 41 crimson-robed cardinals, who will elect a new supreme pontiff next Saturday, attended the solemn two-hour requiem mass in the apex of the church. A forest of candles burned around the crimson-draped catafalque, representing the mortal remains of the Pope. Pius' actual remains lay in a small bare chapel in the crypts below—a few feet from the reputed tomb of the Apostle Peter. Noble guards in silver helmets with long horse-hair plumes, polished breastplates, scarlet jackets and white breeches stood at attention beside the catafalque. Incense curled slowly upwards in wisps of blue mist as it passed through the shafts of sunlight streaming through the vast Michelangelo dome.

ARC LAMPS BLAZE Television arc lamps blazed down on the glittering scene. More than 8,000 people in the apostle fell to their knees at the most solemn moment of the mass, which was celebrated by silver-bearded Eugene Cardinal Dissent, French dean of the College of Cardinals. Before each cardinal was a set of candles.

British Troops Will Begin Moving From Jordan Today

By PAMELA MATTHEWS LONDON (Reuters)—British troops will begin pulling out of Jordan on schedule Monday in a withdrawal operation expected to take three weeks, the defence ministry announced Saturday. Some troops and equipment already have moved from Amman to the southern port of Aqaba in preparation for the evacuation, the announcement said. About 3,000 British troops were sent to Jordan at King Hussein's request after the Iraqi monarchy was overthrown July 14. Britain agreed to withdraw its forces under the terms of a United Nations General Assembly resolution Aug. 21.

PLEDGE NON-INTERFERENCE The unanimously approved resolution, sponsored by the Arab nations, pledged non-interference in the domestic affairs of other nations. Diplomats here said the British withdrawal will provide a critical test of the intentions of President Nasser of the United Arab Republic. Hussein's regime bitterly criticized the U.A.R. for its propaganda broadcasts directed at the pro-Western regimes of Jordan and Lebanon before and during the Iraqi crisis.

Runaway Convict Caught By Tiny Boy In Scotland

PETERHEAD, Scotland (Reuters)—A seven-year-old boy Sunday caught runaway convict Johnnie Ramensky, one of the world's leading safecrackers in war and peace. Within 48 hours of breaking out of Peterhead Jail—by picking a few locks, of course—Johnnie was back behind bars where he has spent about 30 of his 53 years of life. Little David Smith found him hiding in the straw of a barn within sight of the prison. David, who had entered the barn to clean out the loft, hollered to his father: "Ramensky is here." WAS ALLIED AGENT The modern Jimmy Valentine, who parachuted behind enemy lines in the war and cracked Nazi safes, said quietly: "You shouldn't have come in here, sonny—don't be frightened." When David's father and farm worker George Henderson arrived, the fugitive pleaded: "Give me five minutes and I'll get away." They turned Ramensky over to police. Prison authorities were baffled by the latest escape. They said Ramensky vanished from the sealed recreation room Friday night. Both doors of the room were locked and the windows barred. The ace safecracker was serving 10 years for breaking into a garage and blowing a safe there. On his last escape in January, he was at large for 24 hours. TAUGHT COMMANDOS Ramensky was released from prison at the outbreak of war. He instructed commandos in the use of explosives and was later dropped behind enemy lines to crack German safes and obtain secret information.

His exploits gained him a war record as one of Britain's most skilled secret agents. During the Allied advance on Rome, he dropped behind enemy lines with a few other commandos and blew open a safe at a German headquarters. He escaped with the Germans' full plans for withdrawal to Northern Italy. Later, Ramensky raided Nazi air chief Hermann Goering's headquarters in Germany. He cracked a huge safe and escaped with more valuable secrets. At his last trial, the itchy-fingered war hero admitted he had devoted his career to safecracking. The crown pointed to his wartime contribution through his "specialized knowledge of opening lock-fast places." But the judge said his career had been devoted to the theft of clear of crime.

Cardinal Valeri Mentioned As The Next Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Valerio Cardinal Valeri, with almost 20 years of experience in the Vatican's foreign service, is being mentioned by the Italian press as a strong possibility for election as the next pope. As prefect of the Congregation of the Religious, the scholarly cardinal is also the Vatican's top administrator for religious orders. He will be 75 Nov. 7. Born in a small Tuscan village, he decided at an early age to study for priesthood and entered the pontifical college in Rome when he was 17. He was graduated with brilliant marks, not only in theology and philosophy, but also in canon law and Italian civil law. At the age of 27, he became a teacher of dogmatic theology at the regional pontifical seminary at Fano. After serving in the Italian army's medical corps in the First World War, he was transferred to the Vatican secretariate to begin his diplomatic career. In the consistory of 1953, he was raised to the rank of cardinal by Pope Pius XII.

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP)—A family of three and a relative were burned to death in their one-room cabin early Saturday near here. The fire, believed caused by overheated stoves, was spotted by soldiers returning to Camp Petawawa by bus. They thought the fire department had already been notified and did not stop. A fire unit was dispatched from the camp 15 minutes after the soldiers arrived when one of them checked with the fire brigade and found out the fire had not been reported previously. The body of Ernest Hammel, 44, a construction worker at the camp, was found near the only door of the cabin. That of his wife, Freda, 27, was found in the bed. ### KILLED ON ROAD

CHEZZETCOOK, N.S. (CP)—Thomas Roma, 75, of Chezzetcook, about 19 miles from Halifax, was killed Saturday night when struck by a car as he walked across the road to visit his brother's home. Dulles had originally been scheduled to fly directly on a transpolar route from Rome via Alaska to Taipei. Asked before leaving Rome about the surprise visit to Britain, he said it happened "so naturally." "Mr. Lloyd learned that I was coming down (at Brize Norton) for more gas and would be there for dinner," he added. "The ambassador in Washington (Sir Harold Caccia) suggested that we should meet. I said I would be delighted." Dulles said his talks in Rome Saturday with Italian Premier Amintore Fanfani and Foreign Ministers Heinrich von Brentano of West Germany and Couve de Murville of France had been "very helpful." Formosa was among the problems discussed, he added. Von Brentano and de Murville also were in Rome to attend the papal rites. Dulles' 8,200-mile flight to Taipei, with a stop also at Nielson

Dulles Makes Surprise Stopover For Talks With British Official

BRIZE NORTON, England (Reuters)—State Secretary Dulles left by air here Sunday night for Formosa after a 90-minute conference with Foreign Secretary Lloyd during a surprise stopover in his flight from Rome. Dulles and Lloyd discussed the Far East situation and other world problems, but neither would comment on the talks. Lloyd made a special trip to the U.S. air base here to meet with Dulles while his plane was refuelling.

Dulles was heading for talks with Chinese Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek in Formosa after attending final funeral rites in Rome for Pope Pius XII. Besides discussing the Formosa issue, Dulles and Lloyd discussed the Cyprus problem and Anglo-American talks with Russia on nuclear test detection starting in Geneva Oct. 31. IMPROMPTU VISIT Dulles had originally been scheduled to fly directly on a transpolar route from Rome via Alaska to Taipei. Asked before leaving Rome about the surprise visit to Britain, he said it happened "so naturally." air base in Alaska, is expected to put him in Taipei Tuesday morning, Formosa time. MUTUAL ASSURANCES During the two days in Formosa there has been no change in U.S. policy on Formosa. Chiang, in return, is believed ready to give his assurance he will take no independent actions against the Chinese Reds, such as bombing raids on the mainland. But the big question still is whether Chiang will agree to a manpower cut on the offshore island of Quemoy to relieve Communist fears of a Nationalist invasion. The United States is reported to feel that if these fears can be removed, a dependable cease-fire can be achieved. The self-imposed Communist cease-fire around Quemoy goes into its third week. It is due to end next Sunday. The Taipei meetings also are aimed at showing that the United States and Nationalist China are not split on policy in Formosa Strait.

Knocks On Wrong Door Killed By Rookie Cop

BOULDER CITY, Nev. (AP)—A rookie policeman described by his chief as either drunk or out of his mind, killed a man who knocked on his door by mistake Saturday. Then he ran outside and critically wounded a teen-age boy with his police revolver. Jerome Peter Kuk, a decorated war veteran who has been on the police force in nearby Las Vegas only 10 days, was booked on suspicion of murder after he called the police station here and reported: "Come down here. I've killed a dopehead." The dead man was Steve Bowman, 47, a steelworker at the Atomic Energy Commission's atomic test site. Police said Bowman left his home to borrow some tools from a man who lives next door to Kuk. Instead, Bowman knocked on Kuk's door. Investigators said Kuk told them he recognized Bowman as "a fugitive from justice" and a "wanted murderer." SHOTS TWICE Officers quoted Kuk as saying he let Bowman in his house, then pulled his .38-calibre police revolver and shot him twice in the chest. Police said Kuk told them he heard an automobile outside, figured it was "the getaway car," ran outside and fired two shots at it. In the car were William J. Hagaman, 19, Jerry Bertalano, 14,

High Winds Stall Salvage Efforts On Crashed Plane

ARGENTIA, Nfld. (CP)—Rescuers Sunday night feared wind-whipped waves may have broken up a giant United States Navy plane submerged in Placentia Bay here with 10 men believed trapped inside. Navy divers from Norfolk Va., and a giant crane are attempting to salvage the Super Constellation which nose-dived into the bay Saturday after missing the runway of a U.S. Navy base here. Eighteen of the 29 men aboard the four-engine aircraft were rescued by surface vessels. One man is dead. The fate of the 10 trapped men was uncertain. Nobody would comment on the possibility they could survive this long inside the submerged plane. A U.S. Navy officer, the only spokesman available, said "it's pretty grim." Names won't be released until next of kin are notified. WENT DOWN FAST The plane went down so quickly that Lt. John Koskey, the copilot, didn't know it was in trouble "until I felt something rough." ### Peace Returns To Lebanon

By WILTON WYNN BEIRUT (AP)—Lebanon's five-month crisis has ended in a standoff. But at least there is peace. The costly struggle that brought this country to the brink of civil war has proven one thing: Neither side in Lebanon is strong enough to pull this country very far East or West. The population is so evenly balanced in strength as well as numbers that it must stick to its traditional middle-of-the-road neutrality. Lebanon has learned it cannot embark on extreme pro-Western ventures such as embracing the Eisenhower doctrine any more than it can merge with President Nasser's United Arab Republic.

Wing Tip Disappears

A wing tip was visible Saturday but it disappeared under the force of pounding waves Sunday. The divers and the crane were unable to work for five or six hours Sunday because of high winds and waves. Surface craft and helicopters combed the crash area without finding a trace of survivor. The Super Constellation was engaged in transferring personnel from the Patuxent, Md., naval station. Normally an undisclosed number of these planes are used on 14-hour Atlantic barrier patrols. On regular trips they carry a crew of 23. Argentia is on the east side of Placentia Bay on Newfoundland's south coast. About 3,000 Americans man the base here.

FAREWELL TO THE 'BIG O'

EQUIMALT, B.C.—The ensign is lowered for the last time on board HMCS Ontario, the Royal Canadian Navy's west coast-based cruiser. After 13½ years in continuous commission, more than half a million miles steaming over the world's oceans, the ship is being declared surplus and will be put up for sale by the government. The ship has trained several thousand officers and men of the Royal Canadian Navy and she holds a special place in the affections of Canada's sailors. At the paying-off ceremony in Esquimalt this morning Rear Admiral H.S. Rayner, Flag Officer Pacific Coast said: "As Flag Officer Pacific Coast, I have always felt the 'Big O' would do well whatever she was asked to do." It was a fitting epitaph for a stout ship of the Royal Canadian Navy. (RCN Photo)
