Veteran Newspaper Woman Formerly Of City, Dies At 72

A funeral service was held recently in North Madison, Conn., for Mrs. Ethel Longworth Swift, a veteran newspaper woman and one of the first woman editors of the McGill Daily, who died in Hartford Hospital in her - 72rd year.

Born at Charlottetown, Mrs. Swift was educated here and at McGill University. She was the daughter of the late Lt.-Col. John A. Longworth and of his wife Loulse (Palmer) L o n g-worth.

Following her graduation from McGill she started her newspaper career. From 1915 until 1919 she served in the editorial department of the Montreal Star, during which period she lost her only brother, Lieut. Frederick J. Longworth, MC., who was killed on the morning of Armist i c e Day, 1918, while serving with the 36th Battery of Artillery under Lt.-Col. D.A. MacKinnon, DSO.

After the war, Mrs. Swift spent four years in Europe, representing various publications a n d later returned to the U. S. A., where she joined the editorial staff of the New Era, a weekly paper of Deep River, Conn. For this paper she won several national awards for her articles, particularly on nature and wild life subjects.

Many tributes from some of the hundred readers who h a d enjoyed her column entit l e d "My Two Cents Worth" poured in to the New Era, as well as from others who had benefitted from her many humanitarian projects. In the words of Curtiss Johnson, a former publisher of the New Era— "Mrs. Swift was a remarkable and unusual person. I have never known anyone with less bias, less prejudice and a greater desire to see fairness and justice prevail. Her colums on nature were classics several of them having t a k e n prizes in state competitions. She will be sorely missed."

Another tribute from R u t h Warner Robinson read— "Many many hearts are grieved and saddened by the death of our beloved Mrs. E.L. Swift, affectionately known as "Ted". T h e memory of her friendly warmth will remain with us always. She was completely unspoiled by her success and did so much beyond her duty that it distinguished her from the crowd. She went on the wings of the morning as she would have wished to go, because for her, life has been as the prayer of St. Francis of Assisi "Lord make me an instrument of Thy peace", etc.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Stewart Ogilvy of N e w York; a son, John Longworth Swift of Madison, Conn.; three sisters, Mrs. Dorothy A. Waterston and Mrs. Madeleine Traversy, both of Montreal, and Mrs. Joan Ash of Victoria, B.C., and three grandchildren.

Court House Parking Area Made Reserved

Through an order-in-council the provincial government has declared the paved area south of the Charlottetown Law Courts Building a reserved parking zone.

Under the Public Works Act those permitted to park on the site must be in possession of a permit from the Minister of Public Works.

Where parking spaces are designated by signs for use of particular persons, or classes of persons, no other persons or classes of persons are to park in those spaces.

If a police officer or the caretaker of the Law Courts Building finds a vehicle parked in contravention of the regulations, he may remove the vehicle and store it at the owner's expense.

According to the order-in-council "it shall not be a contravention of these regulations to park a vehicle in that area on a Sunday."

The area contains space for about 25 cars. At present, 10 of the spaces adjoining the south wall of the building are marked with the names printer, chief justice, RCMP, sheriff, clerk of the court, prothonotary. Justice Trainor, Justice MacGuigan and Justice Tweedy.

FIRECRACKER IS BELIEVED CAUSE OF FIRE

MONTAGUE — The Montague fire department responded to a fire call about 10:30 Saturday when called to extinguish a fire in a barn on Main Street.

The fire was quickly checked with little damage if any to the building. The fire is thought to have caught in bales of hay when firecrackers were tossed into the building shortly before.

Excitment ran high for awhile as the main siren did not sound until being tested following the fire, this started the usual running and chasing by youngsters and other citizens to determine where the second fire might be.
