It's A Smashing Party With The Jubilee Gang

By MARIAN BRUCE
How to have a smashing birthday party; take one large theatre, and place in it a dozen lively entertainers and an audience of about 900.
To get the party swinging, add a catalyst like Bill Langstroth. If the theatre is at Confederation Centre, and the birthday being celebrated is Canada's 100th Singalong Jubilee singers are a logical choice.
Most of last night's audience at the Centre thought so.
By the time the two and one-half hour show had ended, to the tune of roars of applause and cries for more, the stars of television's Singalong Jubilee had proved two things:
Good talent doesn't have to be imported from across the border—or even from the great beyond known as Upper Canada.
What's more, home-brewed music can prove pretty entertaining. (Yes, Virginia, Canada does have a folk-singing heritage.)

MARITIME CENTERED

Much of the latter part of the program last night centred around Canadiana, with special emphasis placed, naturally, on the Atlantic region. (Or, as Bill Langstroth might say, the Mar-matryes.)
Nova Scotia was represented in song by Jim Bennett's well-known version of "Sable Island Shore", Patricia MacKinnon's "Nova Scotia Song" and Bennett's own composition, a mouth-watering (to a Nova Scotian) description of eating habits of that province's population.
A rousing version of "I See the Bay" by the entire group and of "Rowin' in a Dory" by Bill Langstroth took the audience to Newfoundland.
Fred McKenna entreated Islanders to "stay home on the island and work on the farm" with his "Boys of the Island".
Patricia returned later in the show for a rendition of "Poor Little Girls of Ontario", and teamed with Don Burke for a French-Canadian song.

There was plenty of variety in talents and personalities. The deep, rich contralto of Kay Porter of the Don Burke Four showed up to special advantage in "Dona, Dona", and Patricia MacKinnon's sweet, clear voice shone in the song which has become almost the trademark of her sister, Catherine. "The Nova Scotia Song".
Providing some of the humor which was so liberally sprinkled were Fred McKenna and his detailed instructions for moonshiners and Harold Kempster with "ye olde English madrigals".
The Don Burke Four delivered a couple of jazzed-up popular songs with close harmony and strong, full tones.
Knitting the acts together with an exuberance that kept him hopping around the stage and seemingly in a dozen places at once, was Bill Langstroth, as master of ceremonies.
Langstroth's facial and bodily gyrations, his complete ease on stage, his sometimes ribald humor and his "what me worry" attitude helped to add a vitality which the rest of the more subdued cast lacked.
Jim Bennett suggested last night Confederation Centre is assured of a bright future—it is estimated the place will house thousands of bushels of potatoes, he said.
But if the Jubilee singers show is any portent of things to come, you're not likely to trip over a bag of spuds in the theatre aisle for a while.

THE HOMESTEAD of the famed Island authoress, Lucy Maud Montgomery, who died in 1942, was officially opened to the public in ceremonies at New London yesterday afternoon. Cutting the ribbon to officially open the home was Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Macdonald (right) who is seen being presented scissors to cut the ribbon by Col. W.E. Johnston of Burlington. Dr. Frank MacKinnon of Charlottetown, chairman of the ceremonies, looks on.

Lucy M. Montgomery Homestead Is Opened

SUMMERSIDE — Chief Justice Thane A. Campbell of Summerside reviewed the life and highlights of Lucy Maud Montgomery yesterday at the official opening of the renowned late authoress's homestead in New London.
Mr. Justice Campbell, who was the guest speaker at the official opening, said this was a "memorial to Lucy Maud Montgomery" and congratulated Col. W.E. Johnston of Burlington and all those associated with him in this project.
Speaking further on the life of the late authoress who gained her fame from the book "Anne of Green Gables", he said she "regarded her birth in Prince Edward Island as one of the most important factors in her life".
The authoress, who died in 1942 and is buried in Cavendish, wrote a total of 21 novels, a book of short stories and a book of poems.
Mr. Justice Campbell said that this Saturday, July 3, a commemorative plaque in memory of Lucy Maud is being unveiled in Leisville, Ont. where she lived for years.
Lieutenant Governor W. J. Macdonald cut the ribbon to officially open the homestead yesterday. He along with other feature guests which included Premier Walter R. Shaw and a member of his cabinet, Lloyd MacPhail, were introduced to the gathering by the chairman of the ceremonies, Dr. Frank MacKinnon of Charlottetown.

Col. Johnston gave the history of the homestead and said that K.C. Irving, who had purchased the home along with the adjoining property, had generously donated it back to the people of P.E.I. with the understanding that it would be restored.
During centennial year the property was passed over to the special projects committee, he said, which was requested to supervise the restoration.
Col. Johnston concluded by saying "I hope that the day is not far off when this little home will mean as much to the people of this province as Mount Vernon (the home of George Washington) does to the people of the United States."
Prior to the ceremonies and following them instrumental music was provided by the Kensington Lions band. A presentation was also made to Premier Shaw on behalf of the Kensington Lions by Dr. Ben Riehl.

PARLIAMENT

A brief controversy broke out over the Dorion report when Gordon Churchill (PC - Winnipeg South Centre) referred to a statement in the report that Mr. Favreau informed the prime minister last Sept. 2 Mr. Pearson's then parliamentary secretary, Guy Rouleau, was involved in the Rivard affair. (The prime minister is on record as saying he was first told of this Nov. 24.)
Transport Minister Pickersill said there is not a tittle of evidence to support the Dorion report on this point. Mr. Churchill had asked whether the prime minister had done a "covering up" job last fall.
The federal government's handling of the Quebec government's address to the Queen to curb the veto powers of the appointed legislative council came in for criticism by Andrew Brewster (NDP-Toronto Greenwood).
Mr. Brewster said Ottawa was setting a serious, erroneous precedent by sending the address to London and recommending the British Parliament and the Queen give their approval.

QUESTION ASKED

Just before the supply bill passed Stanley Knowles (NDP - Winnipeg North Centre) asked External Affairs Minister Martin whether he would reply to Mr. Brewster's charges.
"Is the fact that there has been an opportunity to discuss the matter—whether there has been very much discussion or not—all that happens?" Mr. Knowles asked. "The government sends the amendment over and the constitution is amended—is it as simple as that?"
"Yes," replied Mr. Martin, "it is as simple as that."
The 53 days of the third session have been less heated than the second session which featured the lengthy flag debate and the original disclosures of the Rivard affair by Erik Nielsen (PC-Yukon).
The throne speech April 3 featured a war on poverty, including proposals to improve existing welfare programs and steps to boost employment.
Finance Minister Gordon's budget April 26 contained a 10-

Dominion Day Is Favored By Warm, Sunny Weather

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Warm, sunny weather across most of Canada favored Dominion Day celebrations, which included parades, sporting events and in Quebec, separatist demonstrations.
For most Canadians Thursday was a perfect day to go picnicking or swimming.
Canadian armed forces personnel overseas marked the 90th anniversary of Confederation with receptions and parties.
Here in Canada, flags were raised, the traditional 21-gun salute was fired and regional festivals were opened.
Temperatures across the nation were in the 70s, 80s and 90s.
In British Columbia, holiday events included the annual Western Canada Soap Box Derby at Mission City and the Duke of Edinburgh yacht races in Vancouver, while the Alberta Open golf tournament opened in Edmonton.

URGES UNITY

Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker on vacation in Swift Current, Sask., urged in a speech opening a three-day rodeo that Canadians forget their racial backgrounds and determine to make Canada great in future.
In Regina a teach-in continued at the University of Saskatchewan on Canada's policy toward Viet Nam. Manitoba public schools officially adopted the Canadian maple leaf flag.
Ontario's official tribute to the nation passed almost unnoticed in Toronto. About 150 casually-interested persons watched a 21-shot salute in Queen's Park behind the legislative buildings.
Ottawa's celebrations were concentrated on Parliament Hill where a day-long program opened with the changing of the guard and closed with a nationally-televised musical tribute by artists from the 10 provinces representing the ethnic composition of Canada.

Four Quebec Separatists Arrested In Demonstration

MONTREAL (CP)—Four Quebec separatists were arrested and one of them was injured Thursday in an anti-Dominion Day demonstration cut short by police.
The separatists dispersed after police broke up a march they tried to make toward downtown Montreal from Jeanne Mance Park.
Police made the arrests under a hail of eggs and cries of "cochon" (pigs).
The demonstrators clashed with police in attempts to burn a Canadian flag. Montreal Fire Director Armand Durette was hit on the leg by a flying egg.
Blood flowed from the head of one of the arrested youths as police moved him toward a police car still struggling.
Some 300 other young separatists, male and female, circled the arresting police behind a fire station in the park, which is on the eastern slopes of Mount Royal. Some clashes occurred.
Police and firemen had tolerated earlier in keeping the demonstrators from leaving the park.
Police marched in double file along Park Avenue and other streets bordering the park, blocking the procession's way as it sought to make an exit.
per-cent cut in basic income tax, effective today, and controversial legislation to prevent foreign ownership of Canadian newspapers and magazines.
Despite strong opposition by Canada's daily newspaper publishers, the publications legislation was finally approved this week.
Legislation was passed to retire future senators at age 75—they now are appointed for life—and to streamline Commons rules and procedures.

Veteran, Former City Mayor Col. J. R. Paton Dies At 71

Col. J.R. Paton, 71, a resident of Yarmouth, N.S. for two years and native of Prince Edward Island, died in Yarmouth Tuesday.
Colonel Paton, born in Charlottetown, the only son of James and Mrs. Paton, was at one time mayor of Charlottetown. He was 71 at the time of his death.
Rolle, as he was better known, attended West Kent School and Mt. Allison University where he starred as an athlete winning several prizes in various team sports.
Following his return home and service in the militia, he went overseas as a lieutenant with the 105 Battalion in the First World War. Transferred in England to the 26th Battalion, he was wounded while on active service in France and won the military cross for his part in the engagement which resulted in his being invalided home.
He then joined the re-organized militia where he earned promotion to captain, major and lieutenant-colonel.
During his term as Major Paton in the Second World War he served as an area commandant for the Island section of the military district under the late Brigadier Connolly.
In civil life, after the First World War, Col. Paton opened an investment brokerage office which later merged with the Royal Securities Corporation with whom he served as manager of the Charlottetown branch until his retirement a few years ago.
The late Colonel showed his interest in community life by serving among activities in recreational areas, financial work with the Boy Scout Association

Three Cars Collide At West River

A three car collision which occurred near the West River causeway last evening about 6:35 resulted in total damage being estimated at $1,000.
Drivers of the late model vehicles were Robert Jorgensen of 83 Highland Avenue, Blair Macdonald of Nine Mile Creek and Elliott Wight of North River.
The Jorgensen vehicle received about $500 damage while the Macdonald and Wight cars sustained approximately $300 and $200 damage respectively.
The Charlottetown Detachment RCMP investigated the accident and reported no injuries.

All we do at White Rose is sell you gas, change your oil, lubricate your chassis, rotate your tires, and look after your car.

in to see us. We'd like to show you the way it should be done.
We think it's important to fill your tank with the right gasoline. So White Rose Ultra is specially blended to end ping, knock and vapour lock, to give fast starts, good mileage, and smooth performance.
We take a lot of care with our motor oils, too. No matter what kind of oil your car requires, we have the right one.
Another advantage is that White Rose dealers are experienced and competent in car care. Come to think of it, nobody we know offers to look after your car like a White Rose dealer. That's all we do, so try us.

Sounds simple. But easier said than done. Sure, any station will fill your tank, or change your oil. And often, when they say your car is looked after, it's not.
So sometime when you need gas, or oil, or air, or even directions, drop

What else is a service station supposed to do?

If you want your car looked after, try us.
