TEA!

OUR TEA TRADE IS BOOMING!

DURING the Months of November and December our Tea trade increased so much that we had to send an order to London for another supply, in order to keep us going till we receive our Spring stock. We attribute this large increase to the fact that we offered the best value in Teas on P. E. Island, and they gave them a fair trial and were convinced that what we stated was true.

We won't sell you any Tea that we cannot warrant!

ANOTHER MEDICAL MAN TESTIFIES TO THE WONDERFUL EFFECTS OF MALTO PEPTONIZED PORTER In Cases of Dyspepsia and Nervous Depression.

GENTLEMEN,—I have purposely delayed writing you, as I wished to give a thoroughly complete trial to the M P P. It affords me much pleasure now to give it my unqualified approval in the classes of cases in which I have used it: In Atonic Dyspepsia, in convalescence from Nervous Depression, and in cases where the stomach is irritable and rejects stronger forms of stimulants. I have found most marked results from its use, and I strongly recommend its employment. Although this note is unsolicited by you, it is at your disposal for any use you wish to make of it.

Faithfully yours, GEO H. H. DeWOLF, M. D., M. B. C. M., Edin.

AN HEROIC DEED.

Narrow Escape of a Vessel's Crew.

Due to the Efforts of Murdoch Gillis.

IN the midst of the inclement month of January last past, the schooner Avenger, Captain Rice, owned by Mr. George Wightman, of Montague Bridge, sailed from Boston for St. John's Nfld., loaded with kerosene oil and other goods. The vessel arrived off St. John's early on the morning of the 20th January. But a heavy snowstorm setting in she was driven upon the rocks at a most inhospitable spot about fifteen or twenty miles from port. As she was thumping upon the breakers in the midst of an awful sea, the lives of the captain and crew were in the most imminent peril. It was evident that the vessel would soon be a total wreck. The boat was at once launched; but she was speedily swamped. Captain Rice then asked for a volunteer to swim ashore. Murdock Gillis, of Orwell, in this Province, responded to the call. Removing his outer clothing, and having the log line tied to him, he jumped at a signal from the captain upon the breast of an enormous wave, by which he was carried to the shore. But the shore was a precipitous rock, upon which, in the tumult of the waves, it was extremely difficult to effect a landing; and there were in the sea about it a number of barrels of oil swept from the vessel's deck. Impeded and hindered by these, Gillis could not obtain a hold upon any point on the shore, and was obliged to give it up. He was drawn back on board the vessel, where he waited and rested about an hour. Then he tried it again. This time he was successful. Getting his hand into a hole in the rock, he drew himself up; and by catching on to points of rock he succeeded in climbing to a spot at which he could fasten a line. Then he drew ashore a larger line; and by means of this the Captain and crew all got safely to shore. Gillis had nothing on him but his drawers, undershirt, socks and a pair of slippers. In this scanty clothing, hatless and shivering, he had to walk about five miles to the nearest lighthouse. There he obtained more clothes, and the party proceeded to St. John's, having lost everything but their lives, which were saved, as here described, by Gillis' heroic exertions.

We have not been able to communicate with Gillis, but we have good authority for stating that this report is substantially correct. And if so, should not some recognition be made of Gillis' heroism?

Her Privilege This Year.

A BRIDE ELECT GOES TO THE REGISTRAR FOR A MARRIAGE LICENSE.

A wealthy Boston woman, moving in the Hub's best society and living on Commonwealth Avenue, was married last week to a well-known New York man.

A few days before the ceremony she went to the registrar's office, and asked for a marriage license. She said she wanted it for a friend of hers who was sick, and who had asked her to do the errand for him.

The license was given to her, blank of course, and she was shown how to fill it out. Under the registrar's eye and direction she wrote the names of the groom and his father, his occupation, etc, then the name of the bride elect, with the various necessary bits of information about her.

Then the registrar asked her to sign her own name, as representing the purchaser of the license, with her address.

The lady hemmed and hawed, asked questions and tried to evade the point. When she found the name must be signed, she made the best of it, and took the pen bravely and wrote. She fled without any explanations.

The registrar said he felt funny when he found the same name as the bride-elect and as purchaser of the license.

A REMEDY that is endorsed by physicians must have some merit, for no physician of any standing will place his seal of approval on a preparation unless he knows it to be good. Now Estey's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is not only endorsed by physicians but largely used by them in their practice. feb1 1m ANOTHER CRANK.—Jack-the-Dress-Slasher is in New York. He ruins as many elegant gowns as he can safely lay his hands on. He uses a razor, and out of pure wantonness slashes the gowns in the side or back. The names and residences of several sufferers are given in New York papers. The motive is not robbery, for although in some instances the gowns have been cut in close proximity to the pocket, the purse has not been taken.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup has been used by millions of mothers for their children while cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best-known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winsloe's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. 1yr

An Optimistic Pessimist.

(John Kendrick Bangs, in Harper's Bazar.)

In winter days I long for spring;
In summer for the fall;
In April I'd be summering
If I'd my way at all.

And in the gorgeous autumn-time
I deem that season blest
When, 'neath the snow and frosty time,
Fair nature lies at rest.

'Tis thus I'm always happy, for
My spirit's upward led
By thoughts of those good things in store
For me in days ahead.

Odds and Ends.

That which is called firmness in a king is called obstinacy in a donkey.—Lord Erskine.

A face that has a story to tell. How different faces are in this particular. Some of them speak not; they are books in which not a line is written, save perhaps a date. —Longfellow.

It is the habitual thought that frames itself in our life. It affects us even more than our immediate social relations do. Our confidential friends have not so much to do in shaping our lives as thoughts have which we harbor.

"And so your daughter is at school! How does she get on?" "Splendidly; she is studying all the higher branches." "Is she studying the languages?" "Oh yes, she has nearly completed the language of flowers, and is now engaged in the language of perfumes."

At a party given by a great banker, who had made his millions, a lady wit pointed out to her companion, also a banker, the wife of her host, remarking: "What a splendid creature! she ought to be a countess." "Oh yes, beautiful and clever enough," was the reply; "but perhaps she prefers to be a discountess."

The late Duke of Wellington used to say: "I'm all right. If they abolish the House of Lords, I shall go over to Belgium. I'm Prince of Waterloo there. When the great powers swallow up Belgium I can still live in Spain, where I am Duke of Cuidad Rodrigo. And if Spain collapses I shall retire to Portugal and end my days as Marquis of Torres Vedras and Count of Vimiera."

M. Guizot, while on a visit to Lord Aberdeen, in Scotland, was talking to him in the park one day about the English system of elections, when his host stopped before a cottage. "This little house," he said, "recalls to me a shameful deed in my political life." "What! an act of violence?" "You shall hear. I had as tenant here, an independent fellow, who annoyed me horribly. In every election he strenuously opposed me. I made up my mind to be rid of him." "Ha! you turned him out?" "No. I reduced his rent by a guinea, and destroyed his qualification. A mean trick, and I've always been ashamed of it.

An Australian squatter, renowned far and wide for his extreme ugliness, had once made an oath that should he ever come in contact with anyone plainer than himself he would shoot him. Meeting one day with a man he thought was uglier than himself, he explained to him the nature of the oath he had made; then, producing his pistol, requested him to say his prayers. "What!" said the man. "Am I uglier than you?" "Yes," replied the squatter. "Then shoot!" cried the man.

There was a great discussion on the question whether a man can marry on three hundred a year. "All I can say," said the great man "is that when I said 'with all my worldly goods I thee endow,' so far from having three hundred pounds, I question whether, when all my debts were paid, I had three hundred pence." "Yes, my love," said the wife; "but then you had your splendid intellect." "I didn't endow you with that, ma'am," sharply retorted the husband.

Mr. Yates tells a story of one "Charlotte," the Hebe of Goodwin's, a famous supper-house of the old time in the Strand, near St. Mary's Church. She had the immortal reputation of being the only human being who had ever closed the mouth of Douglas Jerrold, which she did in this wise: "He had been asking for some time for a glass of brandy-and water; and when at length Charlotte placed before him the steaming jorum, she said: 'There it is, you troublesome little man: mind you don't fall into it and drown yourself!'"

A ludicrous incident occurred when Carter, the lion king, as he was called, was exhibiting with Ducrow at Astley's. A manager with whom Carter had made and broken an engagement issued a writ against him. The bailiffs came up to the stage door and asked for Carter. "Show the gentlemen up," said Ducrow; and when they reached the stage door there sat Carter composedly with an enormous lion on each side of him. "There's Mr. Carter waiting for you gentlemen," said Ducrow. Go in and take him. Carter, my boy, open the door." Carter proceeded to obey, at the the same time eliciting, by a private signal, a tremendous roar from his companions. The bailiffs staggered back in terror, rolled over each other as they rushed downstairs, and nearly fainted before they reached the street.

From some researches communicated to the Royal Society, it appears that healthy beings go regularly through a daily cycle of variable warmth. The maximum heat is reached at nine a. m., which, in persons under twenty-five years, the temperature of the flesh stands at ninety-nine degrees Fahrenheit, and this is maintained until six p. m., when it steadily falls till an hour before midnight. The amount of decrease by this time is something over two degrees. About three a. m. the upward turn is taken, and the heat increases till nine o'clock. It is curious that this extent of change only occurs to young bodies; old folks preserve a nearly equal degree of heat all the twenty four hours through. Other notable facts are, that feeding has nothing to do with the variations, and that hot or cold baths do not appear to interfere with the regularity of the successive changes.
