Sulphur-Rich Natural Gas In Demand For Fertilizer

CALGARY (CP)—Oil companies in Alberta, for customers in North America, had little cause for delight when they brought in a sour gas well. They often capped it and filed the well data for future use.

Gas with a sulphur dioxide content of 80 or 90 per cent (usually known as sour gas) was considered uneconomic for natural gas production. And no one wanted the sulphur.

Today it's a different story. The rapidly-increasing use of fertilizer, which uses about 40 per cent of all world sulphur production, is making every ton produced valuable. Today, sour gas properties bring high bids and the world demand for sulphur fast outstrips supply.

"I cannot see world supply catching up with demand for another five years," said W. H. Manley, president of Jefferson Lake Petrochemicals Ltd., one of the province's major sulphur producers. He forecast a continuing price rise.

The Alberta Bureau of Statistics says sulphur sales from Alberta plants totalled nearly $10,000,000 in the first four months of 1966. This was nearly $3,000,000 more than for a similar period last year. Production was about 550,000 long tons, also up from last year.

So healthy has the supply situation been that when a Japanese trade delegation visited Calgary, offering an immediate long-term purchase of Alberta sulphur, no one was able to take up its offer.

SUPPLIES TAKEN Spokesmen in the industry say their supplies already are committed, despite production of about 1,900,000 tons in Alberta last year.

Sulphur prices now hover around $30 a ton in Alberta, for customers in North America, had little cause for delight when they brought in a sour gas well.
