

MR. AND MRS. J. W. D. MacNALLY

St. Dunstan's Basilica Has Very Lovely Wedding

St. Dunstan's Basilica, Charlotteville was the scene of a very pretty double ring ceremony on September 27th, when Margaret Elayne, daughter of Mrs. W. A. Ready and the late W. A. Ready was united in marriage to John William Donald, son of Mrs. Leigh (Laurie) MacNally and the late Leigh MacNally also of Charlotteville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Preston Hamill.

The charming bride entered the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Frank Gormley, to the strains of the wedding march. She wore the conventional white gown of nylon lace, in ballerina length with the scalloped lace forming the hemline.

The bodice was dotted with iridescent sequins and tiny pearls. The scalloped effect was also shown in the back neckline. The long sleeves ended in points at the wrist. Tiny lace covered buttons formed an attractive back-closing for the bodice.

Her circular elbow length veil of tulle illusion fell gracefully from a dainty-head-dress which had inserts of equine. Her shower bouquet of red roses and white streamers to which tiny rosebuds were attached fell gracefully to the hemline of her dress.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Leigh MacNally, sister-in-law of the groom. Her dress was of crimson silk velvet, on Princess lines, with very full skirt and bracelet length sleeves. With this she wore a white feather head-dress and carried a shower bouquet of white carnations.

The winsome little flower girl was Miss Barbara Jean Gormley, niece of the bride, who also wore crimson velvet, with head-dress in the same shade, white slippers and socks. She carried a small basket of white flowers and white ribbon streamers.

Mr. Leigh MacNally, brother of the groom, acted as groomsmen. The ushers were Mr. Vincent Doiron and Mr. Donald Matheson.

During the marriage service and the signing of the register appropriate hymns were sung by Mr. Frank MacIntyre in his usual pleasing manner. Mr. Albert Blanchard presided at the organ, and also played during the reception.

Eighty guests were present at a reception which was held at the Queen Hotel. Mr. Leigh MacNally was master of ceremonies, Rev. Preston Hamill said and spent a very enjoyable day. It was decided at this meeting that members of the C.W.L. assemble at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Davis Ward on Monday evening, October 13, with 18 members in attendance.

The President, Mrs. Roland Buchanan assisted by Mrs. Joan MacNevin, conducted the worship service. Readings were given by Mrs. Paul Dawson and Mrs. Mervin MacPhee. Season of prayer by Mrs. Killan, Mrs. Mervin MacPhee and Mrs. James Beer followed by the Lord's Prayer. Bible study taken from 3 chapters of Matthew, was led by Mrs. Killan.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Garden, Field Vegetables Supply Winter's Needs

What a nice time of year this is on farms—seasonally enchanting and full. Now last golds gleam in the sunlight along valley and upland. There remains still some crimson and scarlet among the dark evergreens. . . . On country lanes, steps rustle in the fallen wealth of the Summer. In villages there is scent of burning leaves.

The pullets of our Spring-flock, roam now tongue in cheek, in search of shell. In mind we compare the new-voiced males with the length-and depth of the roasting pan. Now apples ruddy-cheeked are being gathered to cellars. Vegetables are brought in from the gardens—beets and carrots, onions and parsnips, cabbages. . . . and the green and gold of pumpkin and squash. And the farmhouse looking into the months ahead and its menus, counts herself blessed. What an abundance and variety she has about her. . . . on foot! in bin and on shelf.

Appetites need little coaxing these days when folks gain them by working in the fields. How hungrily they come in at meal-time bringing with them the scent of the now damp earth. "There's little to a rib roast!" Jeanie said today surveying with some chagrin in the traces of one that had vanished quickly. They eat, and presently there is an animated "sound of a going" as machines of the harvest set forth again to the field.

Dusk brings supper. And afterwards the men repair to the cellars to store last loads of the day and tidy all, in preparation for the next storing. The children play. We hear them now out in the cool of the night, Granddaughter, Mack and (cousin), Gage who came by after school.

"Lights on!" one a little timid of the dark said at the outset. "No, lights out!" we overheard another say. "How can we play Hide-and-Seek with light making the yards as bright as day? Besides we have the moonlight."

There is moonlight from this Hunter's Moon of October—and into the stillness day young laughs break, and presently there is an excited rush to an aged "pillar" of the back verandah where "One, - two - three, I'm free!" one calls jubilantly. The dogs join in the fun sometimes noisily with happy barks which say "This is the children's Hour, so good!"

But now quiet reigns without. James comes in, hangs up cap and jacket thus writing "Fins" to his day. "Another day—yes, another fine day should see us bring in the last of the mangels," he offers. "But," he remembers, "we won't get much done in the morning—that's certain, for we have to get those fat cattle away. There's always some thing" he grins boyishly.

And October's quiver lightens. Few arrows are now left for that bow!

Until tomorrow, — — — Diary. Good-night.
