Grateful Comerting. Epps's Cocoa. BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal ailment by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

BEYOND THE CITY
AN IDEAL OF THE SUBURBS
BY A. CONAN DOYLE

Mrs. Westmacott sacrificed her trip to ride in her eagerness over her pet subject, and her two fair disciples drank in every word and noted her every suggestion for future use. That afternoon they went shopping in London, and before evening shopping packages began to be handed in at the doctor's door. The plot was ripe for execution, and one of the conspirators was merry and jubilant, while the other was very nervous and troubled.

"What is the acid," Ida answered contentedly. "Mrs. Westmacott said that it would burn holes."
"You might have taken her word for it without trying," said her father dryly. "But look here, pal. See what the book says. The acid in the stomach takes nothing upon trust. Prove all things! I have proved that."
"You certainly have. Well, until breakfast is ready I'll glance over the Times. Have you seen it?"
"The Times? Oh, dear me, this is it which I have under my spirit lamp. It is an atrad there is some acid upon that, too, and it is rather damp and torn. Here it is."

"The doctor took the bagged paper with a rueful face. "Everything seems to be wrong today," he remarked. "What is this sudden enthusiasm about chemistry, Ida?"
"Oh, I am trying to live up to Mrs. Westmacott's teaching."
"Quite right, quite right!" said he, though perhaps with less heartiness than he had shown the day before. "Ah, here is breakfast at last!"

"But nothing was comfortable that morning. The two eggs without egg-spoons, toast which was leathery from being kept, dried up rashers and grounds in the coffee. Above all there was that dreadful smell which pervaded everything and gave a horrible twang to every mouthful."
"I don't wish to put a damper upon your studies, Ida," said the doctor as he pushed back his chair. "But I do think it would be better if you did your chemical experiments a bit later in the day."
"But Mrs. Westmacott says that women should rise early and do their work before breakfast."

"Then they should choose some other room besides the breakfast room." The doctor was coming to a little ruffled. "At first in the open air would soothe him, he thought. "Where are my boots?" he asked.
But they were not in their accustomed corner by his chair. Up and down he searched, while the three servants took up the quest, stooping and peeping under bookcases and drawers. Ida had returned to her studies and Clara to her blue covered volume, sitting absorbed and interested amid the books and the racket. At last a general buzz of congratulation announced that the cook had discovered the boots hung among the hats in the hall. The doctor, very red and flustered, drew them on and stamped off to join the admiral in his morning walk.

"As the door slammed Ida burst into a shout of laughter. "You see, Clara," she cried, "the charn was already. He has gone to No. 1 instead of No. 3. Oh, you shall win a great victory. You've been very good, dear. I could see that you were on thorns to help him when he was looking for his boots."
"Poor papa! It is so cruel. And yet what are we to do?"
"Oh, he will enjoy being comfortable all the more if we give him a little discomfort now. What horrible work this chemistry is! Look at my frock! It is ruined. And this dreadful smell! She then opened the door and thrust her little golden curled head out of it. Charles Westmacott was hoeing at the other side of the garden fence."

"Good morning, sir," said Ida, upon his nose and looked up at her.
"Have you any cigarettes, Charles?"
"Yes, certainly."
"Throw me up two."
"It is my case. Can you catch?"
A walk-in came with a soft thud on the floor. Ida opened it. It was full.
"What are these?" she asked.
"Eggs, yidus."
"What are some other brands?"
"Oh, Richmond Gens and Turkish and Cambridge. But why?"
"Never mind!" She nodded to him and closed the window. "We must remember all those, Clara," said she. "We must learn to talk about such things. Mrs. Westmacott knows all about the brands of cigarettes. Has your run come?"
"Yes, dear. It is here."
"And I have my stonk. Come along up to my room now. This smell is too abominable. But we must be ready for him when he comes back. If we sit at the window, we shall see him coming down the road."
The first morning air and the genial company of the admiral had caused the doctor to forget his trouble, and he came back about midday in an excellent humor. As he opened the hall door the vile smell of chemicals which had spoiled his breakfast met him with a redoubled virulence. He threw open the hall window, entered the dining room and stood agast at the sight which met his eyes.
Ida was still sitting among her bottles, with a lit cigarette in her left hand and a glass of stout on the table beside her. Clara with another cigarette was lounging in the easy chair with several maps spread out upon the floor around her. Her feet were stuck up on the coal scuttle, and she had a tumbler of some redish brown composition on the smoking table close at her elbow. The doctor gazed from one to the other of them through the thin gray haze of smoke, but his eyes rested finally in a settled stare of astonishment upon his elder and more serious daughter.
"Clara!" he gasped. "I could not have believed it!"

How a Queens County Man Found Permanent Healing.

His Own Experience Tells Fully and Freely some Truths which all Readers of this Paper Should Know.

Here and there, in almost every town of our province, are "chronic" cases over which doctors disagree; cases that become worse year after year. It is to reach such that the gentleman to whom these lines refer, and whose portrait is here given, has written the story of his case.

Mr. Branscomb's home is in Chipman, Queens Co., N. B. It was there that a representative of the Grocer company, called upon him, Sept. 1st, of the present year. His greeting was most cordial. He gladly acknowledged his thanks, giving expression to the following statement:

"It is five years since I first became afflicted with a form of indigestion. Last winter it became more severe, developing into chronic diarrhea. I cannot tell you how much I suffered for six long weeks. It seemed as though relief could not be found. You will remember that I told you of my condition, and asked your advice about taking a bottle of GROVER'S STYRP. You told me that the medicine was a laxative and might not meet my needs. I delayed buying for a few hours until I began to hope that it would help me. Even my clothes seemed a burden because of bloating of stomach. It was with difficulty that I kept about sufficiently to attend to my business.

But I am a well man now from the use of your remedy. In three days after I bought GROVER'S STYRP the terrible pain and distress across my stomach were removed. My bowels rapidly assumed a natural, healthy condition. Now I eat and drink as well as I ever could. I have gained constantly in flesh since March last. I am perfectly cured. It seems a duty for me to state my case fully, that others who suffer as I did may know where to find a cure."

Truly yours,
E. A. BRANSCOMB.
