Let's Talk It Over

A Prince County Viewpoint

One of the apparently insoluble problems in Prince Edward Island's education picture, which presents itself every year at this time is what is to be done about pupils who remain out of school for weeks to help pick up the Island's potato crop. There is little doubt that in this time of inflation when despite the politician's claim that a more sensible though slower way of fighting it is in progress, many people are forced to wage a bitter battle for economic survival, the money which children earn in the potato fields is necessary to make ends more nearly meet.

It is also true that children who stay out of school for a protracted period at this time of year very often, unless they are in the brilliant class, fall so far behind in their classes that they never actually recover during the rest of the school year. What to do? Education is more important than the luxuries of life, but scarcely as important as the bare necessities.

There seems to be a number of serious accidents this year caused by motorists taking that 100 to one chance of going through a stop sign at early morning hours when traffic is at its lowest ebb. The temptation to disregard the warning sign is greatest at that time because the chance of meeting another car is reduced to a minimum. The chance is there, however, and the wise driver will observe the rules at all hours of the day and night.
