Desirable Property

That beautiful property opposite Birch Grove, Freeport, at present occupied by Mrs. Crosby. There are about 40 acres of some well cultivated land, and the buildings, including dwelling house, barns, outhouses, etc., are in good condition. The property includes all of a large and beautiful grove very suitable for picnic parties, on the north side of the main road, and is in a charming spot near churches, school, hall, stores, and within a quarter of a mile from Freeport Railway Station, and two miles from Dunk River. Terms will be made to suit purchasers. Not sold by private sale before Tuesday, August 31st, it will then be offered in auction at 11 o'clock, p. m. For further particulars apply to E. CROSBY, Station Agent, Cape Traverse.

TIME'S CREASES.

The Origin and Progress of the Wrinkles on the Face.

We all become interested sooner or later in the subject of wrinkles. They are the "irreparable outrage" of Racine, but although they are so universal few have endeavored to explain their origin and progress. Wrinkles are produced in the first instance by the frequent repetition of some muscular contraction or by sickness. They are not merely superficial, but appear when the epidermis is removed, and are found not only in the face, but all over the body. They do not run in any regular direction, and no law has been found including all their directions. It has been said that the life history of a man can be written from his wrinkles, but physiology hardly agrees in this instance, for it has still to be proved that a general's wrinkles differ from those of a physician's, or a laborer's from a lawyer's. A man does not always or even generally carry about a faithful autobiography in his face. Although no part of the body is free from them they visit chiefly the face, particularly round the eyes and lips. They run in all directions—horizontal, vertical and oblique, straight, curved and crossed. Going in the sun with the face insufficiently covered brings them on prematurely, but they are in every case normal at 40 or even earlier.

Vertical wrinkles between the eyes come quickly to men who study or worry themselves. This can readily be imagined. The eyebrows contract naturally when in deep thought. Grief or worry produces the same action, which, when repeated frequently, produces a fold in the skin, marking emotion undergone many times. Between these and the straight lines on the forehead, already mentioned, come the arched wrinkles of the forehead, found above the root of the nose. These often tell of long and painful mental torture. They arise from a cruel physical suffering or of still more great development of the vertical wrinkles and the resistance of the skin above.

The crow's feet mark the passing of the fortieth year and are characterized by furrows which diverge from the external angles of the eyes in all directions, like the claws of a bird, from which they are named. The wrinkles of the nose, which descend from the nostrils down each side of the mouth, are, perhaps, the first to appear. These furrows are created in laughing and amastication. A simple smile is sufficient to produce them, so it is not surprising that the repetition of the commonest acts should soon be graven on the face. They are also hereditary. The wrinkles of the cheeks and chin follow the oval of the face and are caused by a diminution of the fatty substance under the skin, which then falls into folds. The small wrinkles which form a network in the lower parts of the cheeks near the ears have the same origin and only appear in old age. These found in the upper eyelids and sometimes in the lower, which give the eyes an air of fatigue, are the results of hard lying, grief or worry.—New York Ledger.

KNOW THEIR POWERS.

The Exceptional Womanly in the Rough Girls of New York.

In the girls of the rougher tenement house districts the eternal womanly wears such a disguise of the eternal gamin that it cannot always be recognized. Their pertness and sauciness are only sharpened by their precocity and their tomboy habits of street Arabia. A reporter recently had occasion to visit lower Washington street to ascertain the facts regarding the murder of a boy down there. He was obtaining his information from the boys of the neighborhood, who might have been playmates of the dead youth. A circle of them, together with three or four girls of 15 or 16 years, was gathered around him.

A big, hulking youth about 20 years old arrogated to himself the place of spokesman. He was evidently the tyrant, the bully of the street, a young "Bill the Brute," who had not yet acquired a wife to beat and was consequently an object of great interest to these misses, whose skirts had not yet grown down to their ankles. With his big, harsh voice he silenced every interruption of his tale, saying:

"Shut up there! I'm tellin' this yarn." Of course this adjuration, which forms a part of the ordinary courtesy of the neighborhood, did not quiet the girls. They chaffed him and the reporter and giggled until at last the speaker said to the reporter:

"Don't mind them. They're no 'count. They're nothin' but girls."
"Of course he'll mind us, smarty," instantly retorted one of the girls. "We's the makin' of ladies."
It was the eternal womanly of street Arabia.—New York Tribune.

THE CHATEAU CHANTILLY.

How It Came to Be Left to the Institute of France.

The chateau of Chantilly was bequeathed by the late Duc d'Aumale to the Institute, but this was really no new gift, as it had been virtually made in 1884. The Saturday Review of 1886 speaks of it as follows: The Duc d'Aumale has responded by a crushing blow to the unmerited indignity offered by the French republic to the house of France. He has required the penalty of ostracism inflicted on the Orleans princes as a sop to the tyrannous anger of the extreme republican party by dowering the land of his birth with the most splendid and the rarest gift ever offered to a nation by an individual.

To the north of Paris, about 25 miles from the capital, Chantilly is situated on the confines of vast forests, in an undulating region watered by the Oise. About 1840 the Duc d'Aumale first conceived the idea of rebuilding Chantilly. His two sons, the Prince de Conde and the Duc de Guise, were dead.

During 40 years the Duc d'Aumale had sedulously collected all the remnants of the splendor of the Montmorencys and of the Condes that he could find. M. Daumet was asked to build a palace worthy to receive these precious souvenirs. But, like his predecessors, M. Daumet was limited by certain natural conditions.

The marvelous subterranean rooms and galleries existed still, and the moats, and the strangely shaped triangular rock, and this subterranean plan dictated and commanded the form of the structures above ground, because the foundations remained, and on this honeycombed rock it was next to impossible to displace them.

The plan of the castle of the Boutilliers, of the Montmorencys and of the grand Conde had to be followed by the Duc d'Aumale. The strange perimeter had to be respected, and the new facades inevitably reproduced the big towers at the angles, the strong spurs, the posterns and the drawbridges, which existed from the earliest times, in the ground plan. The technical difficulties which the architect had to surmount were immense, especially the works undertaken in the honeycombed rock, with a view to supporting the projected structure above ground.

In brief, his performance was this: To follow rigorously the perimeter of the old renaissance castle, to provide fine state-rooms and galleries for the reception of certain specified objects of art, to accommodate the chateau for living purposes and to build a chapel, in the adornment of which were to be utilized stained glass, sculpture, wood carving, statuary and falence slabs saved by Lenoir from the chateau of Beconou.—Exchange.

Du Maurier Heroines.

When Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett was first presented to Du Maurier, who was, in point of fact, rather an undersized man, she exclaimed:

"Oh, I am so glad that you are not six feet tall!"

"But why?" asked Du Maurier.

"Because for these many months," replied Mrs. Burnett, who is considerably below medium height, "you have simply denied us the right to live. You have made us feel that a woman who is not six feet tall has not the right to exist."

"Oh, that is only a trick of mine!" laughed Du Maurier. "I have started again and again to make my heroine a little woman, but before I know it she has somehow grown way beyond my own recognition."—American Queen.

The Bell Organ & Piano Co., Ltd.

Dear Sir,—Allow me to compliment you on the qualities of the Piano ordered from you for the Toronto Conservatory of Music. The tone is remarkably pure and brilliant throughout, while the bass is deep and powerful. The mechanism is apparently perfect, the touch elastic, and in appearance the entire Piano is a work of art

Yours truly,
