MR. AND MRS. WILSON BUFFET

Georgie Belle Dyment Is Wed In Double Ring Ceremony

Tyne Valley United Church was the scene of a lovely summer wedding recently when Georgie Belle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Dyment, Northam, became the bride of Wilson Buffett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Buffett of Glace Bay, N.S.

Rev. N.K. Charman performed the double ring ceremony. The church was decorated for the occasion with colorful potted plants and trailing ivy. The wedding music was in charge of Mrs. Herman Dyment, who accompanied Mrs. Millar Craig, as she sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her floor length gown of white lace over taffeta with rows of net trimmed with nylon lace edging on back and falling from the waist to hemline; and long filly point sleeves. The elbow length veil of silk illusion with border of nylon lace was held in place by a crown of fine lace studded with sequins. She carried a cascade of yellow roses.

Miss Shirley Dyment, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Miss Bertha MacLean as bridesmaid, were gowned identically in street length coral dresses of nylon chiffon over taffeta with white lace panel on front and wing collar. Their headdresses were of white gathered net with coral rose trim to match dresses, and matching gloves. They carried colonial bouquets of shastas to blend with the dresses.

Harold Martin is best man and James Dyment brother of the bride, and Michael Whelan ushered the guests to their pews which were marked with satin bows and ivy.

Mrs. Dyment chose for her daughter's wedding an aqua draped petal overskirt sheath dress with white accessories and a corsage of pink feathered carnations. The groom's mother was attired in pink lace over taffeta with white accessories and a corsage of white feathered carnations.

A reception for sixty guests was held at the Birch Hill Lodge when telegrams were read from Mrs. J. Buffett, grandmother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. David Finlayson of Ottawa by the best man.

For the honeymoon, to central Canada and the New England States, the bride travelled in a white sheath dress with pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Out-of-province guests included Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Buffett of Glace Bay, N.S.

YEMEN OBJECTS

LONDON (Reuters) — The government of Yemen said Friday it reserved the right to consider null and void Britain's plan to merge the colony of Aden with the South Arabian Federation. In a statement issued by its legation here the Yemen government also reiterated its long-standing claim to large parts of Federation territory.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Blossoms Of Goldenrod Herald Summer's Passing

Now came a second day of sunshine for the farm-folks. And over the fields, simmered that precious blue haze which makes for all, a perfect summer day.

"The sun!" we exclaimed welcoming it gratefully this morning. Yet remembered how before this in summers gone, we have wished instead for lowering skies, and have lifted our face skyward, when at length, after a spell of continued sun and heat, we would catch the first relieving raindrops there.

"Great pasture, the stock has" the younger farmer commented this evening when he stopped a minute in the yard to watch the horses and the cattle grazing in the pasture close by. "And have you noticed how much the lawn-trees have grown since spring? It's actually amazing to see the growth there!"

"The shrubs too have made remarkable growth, this strange, showery summer" we said.

Now down by the stream wildings of asters bloom. August put them there in pretty shades of blue as well as in white. "This year the Canada goldenrod has perfect blossoms. They were never more beautiful" we offered to Granddaughter today. "Let's not speak of them" she suggested with a wistful smile. "No matter how pretty they are their blossoms indicate that the summer has about passed away It's not that I regret the holiday's end nearing, but that shades of winter are just back of the hills. And summer is so pleasant."

"Yes" an older farmer remarked when we chatted the other day at the fair. "This is a lovely day! It couldn't be better."

"It's summer at its best" we agreed.

"But when this is over, we'll see signs of the autumn everywhere. Yes, this Fair seems to be the dividing-line, the boundary of sorts. It's summer when it opens" he mused "and autumn when it ends! Time then to begin making ready for the winter."

"But there'll still be lovely weather" we said. "The harvest time, you know."

"Oh yes, but the days then, are not like those of summer. There's little last to them — not much of a day between the sun's rise and fall — By rights I should be home today, tidying the shed for the wood. But old habits" he twinkled "are hard to break."

"And you're enjoying this?" we said.

"In a way. After a manner, I should say. It's a good show. Oh, perhaps not so interesting in some ways, but by and large, good. Yet I find myself missing so many I would once be sure to meet here— former exhibitors of stock, old friends and neighbors. 'Fallen by the way' they have."

"Fallen by the way". So too, has now, this lovely August day.

Until tomorrow — — Diary—
Good-night.....

QUEBEC MAN FINED

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) Frank Diquinzio, 29, of Ville Ste. Marie, Que., Monday was fined $300 and costs for having a firearm in his car illegally while returning from a visit to the United States. Diquinzio, who said the .22-calibre automatic pistol is registered with the RCMP, said he was carrying it in his car because he has a young brother at home and did not want him to get his hands on it.

MARY HAWORTH

How To Keep Away From Bragging Mother-In-Law?

Dear Mary Haworth: It isn't my nature to brag and usually I avoid people who do. But how does one keep away from a mother-in-law who brags about everything from housework done to favors rendered?

I don't dislike her; she is respectable and kindly. But she is wearing my nerves threadbare with her constant self-praise.

I have an evening job and usually she takes my son for a walk, which she always underscores. I take him for walks too, and spend time with him in other ways that he enjoys: but I don't boast about it. I believe in letting one's life speak for itself.

Another example: one day he was restless and crying and I was trying to quiet him. She snatched him out of my arms and took him to her house, next door. There I sat, looking like a dummy in front of everyone.

I often think we would appreciate each other more if we didn't live so close. My husband knows it is fraying my nerves. I would be glad for any solution. Please advise me. — L.D.

Dear L.D.: Here I go again, sticking my neck out, inviting more buckshot from moms-in-law. But it appears to me that your mother-in-law is competing with you essentially, rather than trying to lend a truly friendly hand in your domain.

She is trying (though perhaps unconscious of her motive) to prove to interested onlookers that whereas you may be younger, prettier, busier, more in demand, etc., that nevertheless she is altogether more of a woman, in the sense of being more effective than you, in the housewife and mother role.

When an experienced person conspicuously "helps" a comparative greenhorn in such a way as to leave the greenhorn looking foolish or feeling bested and apologetic — as if found incompetent to meet his (or her) responsibility — the experienced person is registering hostility, not benevolence.

He (or she) is by implication disparaging the greenhorn — manifesting hostility, envy, rejection and the like.

This is the emotional pressure you are up against with your mother-in-law, it seems.

As for how to cope, to ease the pressure, the answer is — behave in keeping with your adult status. As you aren't a child in relation to her, don't act like a child— or a dummy. Do with words-to-say-man. Be courteous, yes; but also properly self-assertive, as necessary.

For example, if she ventures again to snatch the child from your arms, or other downgrades your efforts or your title to motherly, that's your cue to project, calm, firm outspoken resistance to her mistake in that particular.

Don't wilt in embarrassment, letting her have her way, in hopes of hiding from viewers the clash of egos. That brand of childish timidity encourages her to walk over you. Stand up maturely to the situation she creates by her pushy lack of real consideration.

Protect your adult rights by excercising them, and let the chips fall where they may.—

M. H.

Dear Mary Haworth: I have been living in this apartment building for more than eight months. An extremely attractive girl lives on another floor. I have been trying for months to meet her.

When our paths cross (which is seldom) I can't think of anything clever to say. I even walk the corridors on the floor, hoping to run into her. I've even thought of leaving notes on her car.

How can I meet her or date her and still keep a certain amount of dignity? P.S.: Apartment houses in this city are such cold, lonely places.—L.F.

Dear L.F.: Your attitude is furtive, which suggests that you are neurotic and probably socially maladjusted— a solitary, rather friendless soul. It seems you harbor guilt - tinged fantasies about the girl — a la The Secret Love Life of Walter Mitty — instead of making a wholesome pitch at getting acquainted, literally.

For advice: assuming the building has a resident manager, this manager will know you. So ask this dignitary (manfully) to introduce you to Miss So-and-So and vouch for your good character. Be aboveboard about your wish to meet the girl. Don't try to approach her by stealthy pursuit, through mash notes, etc. — which in fact should scare her off, if she has good sense.— M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Guardian.
