

2-5 INCHES SNOW

Nasty Old Winter Blasts Sweet Spring

By DAVE MILLER
 Ah, sweet spring, with birds and flowers and gentle showers... but somebody goofed. Instead of flowers and showers, Prince Edward Island is scheduled to receive two to five inches of snow and gale warnings have been posted in all marine areas.

The Charlottetown Radio Range reported a temperature of 32 degrees at 11 o'clock last night and the mercury was expected to drop to a very un-springlike 20 degrees. The balmy winds of spring were anything but balmy last night as they were coming from the north at 25 with gusts to 30 miles per hour.

Generally in the spring, a young man's fancy lightly turns to love or fish. Love is still possible on Prince Edward Island, but fishing will present a slight difficulty. Most rivers, ponds and streams are still covered with ice, and P.E.I.'s vital link, the MV Abequell is running an average of 20 minutes late each crossing as she battles the ice in Northumberland Strait.

Approximately two weeks ago, CNR officials at Moncton cancelled the 7 a.m. crossing from Borden, but the CNR train dispatcher announced last evening that the ferry will make a 6 o'clock trip this morning to clear up accumulated freight.

With spring, Prince Edward Island receives its annual weight restrictions and some of the province's highways begin to resemble a football field after the game.

Snow began to fall last night in Charlottetown at approximately 10 o'clock and it began to look like winter is going to have one last fling.

Local Lions Sponsor Gay Evening

KENSINGTON — Over 700 attended what is termed a thoroughly enjoyable and entertaining program at the local regional high school auditorium last evening.

Sponsored by the Kensington Lions Club the program was highlighted by the Amazing Damsel who, for the second night in a row here, delighted his audience with the lighter side of hypnotism with the co-operation of several willing subjects.

Beginning at 7:30 some 300 persons were present at a concert by the Kensington Regional Lions Band.

Selections on the Hammond organ by Lowell Huestis filled the interlude between the band concert and the Damsel show which began at 8:30.

Allan Clark Dies In Hosp.

ALBERTON — The death of Allan Clark of Alma occurred Friday afternoon in the West-ern Hospital following a long period of failing health. He was 82.

Mr. Clark was born at Malpeque but with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Clark, came to live in Alma more than 60 years ago.

Mr. Clark was a hard-working and successful farmer. He had a love for horses and it was with genuine reluctance that he saw them being replaced by cars and tractors. He was known as a good neighbor and his home was a centre of hospitality and kindness.

In October, 1913, he was married to Barbara Hardy of Montrose. She survives him, as do their two sons and two daughters, Preston of Saint John, N.B.; Mrs. Heber Ramsay (Muriel) of Alberton; Mrs. George Irving (Beatrice) of Alberton; and John on the home farm at Alma. There are 18 grandchildren.

The funeral will be held from Montrose United Church, Sunday afternoon at 1:30. Interment in the church cemetery.

VICTIM'S

Liuzzo insisted he was not a bitter man, adding:

TERMED GESTAPO

"I'm just saying what I think. And I think they've got a Gestapo state down there run by the Ku Klux Klan. Full responsibility, as far as I'm concerned, rests with the governor of Alabama."

Mrs. Liuzzo, a former medical technician, attended Detroit's Wayne State University four days a week, taking courses in sociology and political science.

Penny, an 18-year-old daughter, and Sarah Evans, a Negro who "joined the family 20 years ago as a servant and became a personal friend," kept house for Liuzzo's sons, Tom, 13, and Anthony Jr., 10, and daughter Sally, 6. A 17-year-old daughter now is Mrs. Mary Johnson of Ringgold, Ga.

Penny had planned to enter college in suburban Highland Park in June, "but now I don't know."

Little Sally's sled was being buried by new snow on the front porch of the modest, ranch-type Liuzzo home in northwest Detroit as the day wore on. She was at relatives, "because she couldn't understand."

MINISTER CALLED

A Selma minister had called Liuzzo Thursday night with the shattering news.

Liuzzo recovered somewhat from physical near-exhaustion Friday morning when Lee White, a special counsel to President Johnson, telephoned from Washington to assure him that "everything that can be done will be done."

Liuzzo had tried vainly to reach the president personally Thursday night to ask him, "where do we go from here?"

Before Johnson announced FBI arrest Friday of four Ku Klux Klansmen in connection with what Johnson termed "a horrible crime," Liuzzo had told reporters:

"So what if they arrest somebody down there? With their prejudiced, all-white system of justice, what do you expect? Nothing."

Governor George Romney of Michigan said in a telegram to Liuzzo "the shocking murder of your wife is ironic evidence of the need to do battle for the cause for which she died." Detroit Mayor Jerome Cavanagh said "The murder... is another example of the sickening and shocking events taking place around Selma, Ala."

Report from Parliament Hill

Health Minister Hubert MacNeill has announced a first step in standardizing birth, death and marriage certificate fees will take place April 1, when a flat $2 rate will be in effect in the province.

The new rate, already in effect in New Brunswick, will also be adopted by Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Quebec, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Yukon, and the other provinces are exploring the possibility of following suit.

The Vital Statistics Council for Canada recommended the standard fee at a meeting in Ottawa last June. It was found that variations in fees charged in different provinces and for different types of certificates in the same province, as well as extra copies of the same document, were confusing to the public.

The new rate will replace prices ranging from $1 to $5 and will apply in all applications submitted on or after April 1 in the participating provinces.

CHARLOTTETOWN LEGION TOPS ZONE DART TOURNAMENT

The Charlottetown Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion made a clean sweep in the Queens County Zone Legion Dart Championships. The two Charlottetown teams ended in a tie with the Rustico Legion team captained by Jim DeLeon. In a playoff, Charlottetown copped the winner and runner-up spots and was presented with the Oland trophy. Reg. MacKinnon, chairman of merits and awards, presents the trophy to Ernie Duffy, Ivan Conners, Leo Duffy and John MacKinnon. The winners and runners-up will now enter the provincial finals. This was the first year the zone competition was held and the Charlottetown Branch paid a tribute to the Rustico Branch for the fine job they did in handling the tournament.

Kensington Trade Bd. To Study Late Mail

KENSINGTON — The Kensington Area Board of Trade held a discussion on the late delivery of mail to the Kensington Post Office resulted in the chairing of a letter asking for the appointment of a representative from the Kensington area board for the ensuing two years, also for a nomination for vice president for P.E.I. Several members were nominated as representatives but each declined, and both matters were left over for later consideration.

The secretary, Archie Johnston, read the minutes of a post office, and in turn on the special meeting held Feb. 18, rural routes.

A brief discussion was held on the payment of dues for the current year. The question of a possible fire hazard at the Kensington rink had been brought to the attention of the board, and the matter was left for the consideration of the committee chairman of civic affairs, Allan Murphy.

Edson Rayner, whose term as representative on the Maritime Board of Trade has expired, reported a letter asking for the appointment of a representative from the Kensington area board for the ensuing two years, also for a nomination for vice president for P.E.I. Several members were nominated as representatives but each declined, and both matters were left over for later consideration.

Mental Health Workshop To Have Follow-Up

The Canadian Mental Health Association's concern regarding the important role of the schools for early in shaping the mental health of children was demonstrated recently in their sponsorship of a one-day workshop for school supervisors and child guidance personnel held at the Provincial Vocational Institute.

Following opening remarks and welcome by Urban McQuaid, executive director of the Prince Edward Island Division, CMHA, Dr. Malcolm Beck, child psychiatrist, outlined the services available under the program of the provincial division of mental health.

The afternoon session was conducted by Russell Ewing, psychologist, and was concerned chiefly with testing, measurements and guidance. Lively discussion periods followed both sessions.

The keen interest of the 18 participants was clearly evident and, as a result, a follow-up workshop is now being planned for the important role of the schools for early in May.

PARENT-TEACHER DAY AT PRINCE OF WALES

Friday afternoon was parent-teacher day at Montgomery Hall for the parents of pupils who are first and second year students attending Prince of Wales College. Approximately 300 interested parents came to chat with the faculty concerning the welfare of the students. Buildings on the campus were open to the general public and people were free to visit class rooms, laboratories and recreational areas of the institution. From the left are Mr. and Mrs. Verner Coles, North Milton, whose son Charles is a first-year student, and R. J. LeClair, head of the French department of PWC. Members of the Honor Society ushered and poured tea while Dr. Frank MacKinnon received the guests.

Production Of 'My Fair Lady' Proves True To Name—Fair

By MARIAN BRUCE
 After years of living up to the theatre capitol of the world, Eliza Doolittle finally made her appearance in Charlottetown last night.

The Acadia Drama Workshop presentation of Lerner and Loewe's "My Fair Lady" opened a two-night stand at Confederation Centre theatre yesterday, marking the first performance in Prince Edward Island of the world-famous Broadway play, which, in movie form, is currently up for a dozen Academy Awards.

Audience reaction here to the ADW version of the play cannot be described as overwhelmingly enthusiastic.

There were titters and chuckles. And what might be termed restrained applause. But gasps of delight at what the theatre program calls "the world's greatest musical" were conspicuously absent.

SPARKLING ELIZA
 Eileen Bolcher, an Annapolis Valley housewife, was extremely adept in her handling of the role of Eliza Doolittle, the Cockney flower girl who is transformed by Professor Henry Higgins into a lady who observes all the niceties of enunciation, pronunciation and grammar.

The metamorphosis was convincing, the role was played with a great deal of energy and sparkle, and Mrs. Bolcher's singing voice shone brightly in such familiar numbers as "Wouldn't It Be Lovely" and "I Could Have Danced All Night."

Another well-handled part was that played by Jack Sheriff—who is also the show's director—as Henry Higgins.

Up to a point, on stage Mr. Sheriff is Henry Higgins—the scholarly air, the loquacious, the bachelor-type smugness.

Unfortunately, Henry Higgins must speak, and at great length, at times. And when Mr. Sheriff attempts to project his rather high-pitched voice into the balcony, much of the effectiveness of the acting is lost: one becomes seized with an almost uncontrollable urge to rush in with a cough syrup to ease the man's strained vocal cords.

LACKS VITALITY
 Apart from the show's two stars, the performer who stood out and help to revive a production otherwise lacking in vitality, was James Crossan as Alfred P. Doolittle.

Doolittle, along with Harry and Jamie Tim Cohoon and Brian Johnston, seemed to capture the spirit of the show, and the hearts of the audience as well, in scenes which included the song "With a Little Bit of Luck" and "Get Me to the Church on Time."

However, the gaiety and vigor of these scenes fell by the wayside in other scenes which should have been filled with life, but were only slightly better than draggy. Perhaps the performers were tired.

HIGH POINT
 The costumes proved a high point of the show, and were especially striking in the Ascot race scene, a dramatic black and white effort.

Costuming was also good in the portrayal of the embassy ball. Unfortunately, only a small portion of the stage was used, and the dancers shuffled around in the cramped space in a manner faintly reminiscent of grade-school dancing class.

"My Fair Lady" calls for frequent scene changes, and if not smoothly-handled, the result is a patchwork of unconnected scenes.

The Acadia production was almost three and one-half hours long. During that period, the players succeeded in infecting the audience with the moods of the play, gay and sad, on several occasions.

But all too frequently, the spell was broken, and the audience was a little waded to come back to reality—especially during the times it was left to stare at the dark blue curtains of the theatre stage.

PENSION

of $25 a month to all persons aged 65 to 70 who are retired from gainful employment.

The Conservative leader proposed both new programs be financed out of the "terrific fund" of contributions that will start flowing in when the Canada Pension Plan goes into operation next Jan. 1.

He argued this would not place a new charge on the public treasury and therefore his amendment was in order.

The deputy speaker ruled after a procedural argument the amendment conflicted with the principle of the bill, which was approved 184 to 0 last November. The amendment would provide for benefits to non-contributors in a plan that was designed to be exclusively contributory.

Mr. Lamoureux, Liberal MP for Stormont, also found the Diefenbaker bid would have involved an extra expenditure by the government to cover administrative costs. Only cabinet ministers can propose spending plans.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the pension plan has gone through four "metamorphoses" since the original version was introduced in the House June 21, 1963.

Each new version had been hailed as perfect by the Liberals but there was still considerable room for improvement.
