Concert Greatly Enjoyed At The San

Patients at the Sanatorium moved into a new environment for a brief half hour on Saturday afternoon when the R. C. M. P. band, as a final gesture of goodwill to Charlottetown, enlivened the routine of Hospital life by giving a concert on the lawn.

Being a musician in the R. C. M. P. is purely a "hobby job" and studies and practices are all carried out during the men's time. Regular police exercises, studies and duties are routine jobs just as with other constables and staff men, the musical training being a matter of choice among those who are so inclined and show ability.

A new experience for the men gave them a chance to hear themselves as others hear them, when "some of the boys at the San," as Dr. Creelman explained it, "made a recording of what they played and ran it off for them." Their criticism and bantering remarks to each other, indicated their interest in the unusual circumstance.

Dr. Creelman expressed himself as greatly pleased with the kindness of Inspector Cooper and his men, for the pleasure they brought with their music to the shut-ins under his care, as well as to the nurses and staff.

To Hold Meeting

19-20, during which time panel discussions will be held bearing on the work of the National Employment Services in Canada and the Maritimes. The most important will be that dealing with the farm labour problem. Speakers, both within and without the employment services, who are familiar with farm labour problems, will take part in the debate. From this pooling of knowledge it is hoped that some solution to the problem will develop. The panel speakers will be announced at a later date.

Last year an institute was held at the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton, and another at Acadia University, Wolfville, and previously panel discussions took place at Dalhousie University in Halifax. It is understood that Charlottetown colleges will be asked to extend facilities and assistance when the institute convenes here.

About a hundred delegates and their wives attended the Fredericton meeting last September. One of the social events on the programme at that time, was an afternoon tea tendered by Mrs. Gregg, wife of Canada's Minister of Labour. President Trueman of the University of New Brunswick, opened the institute with an address. The banquet was addressed by New Brunswick cabinet members and other interesting citizens.

The Charlottetown National Employment office, with assistance from the Regional office in Moncton, will play it's part in organizing the programme for the two day meeting.

the village, carrying away bridges, wrecking houses and hotels and turning the main street into a rubble-strewn torrent.

Arthur Brooks, who was staying at a Lynmouth hotel, said:

"Some of the residents and I were looking out of a window of the hotel last (Friday) night when we saw three people being washed out to sea. We managed to get a hold of them and brought them through the window. This morning (Saturday) boulders were piled 20 feet high outside the same window."

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., July 25—(AP)—Residents of this St. Lawrence River city were agog today over a daytime version of "flying saucers". The objects were seen drifting high in the sky. Onlookers peering through field glasses said they resembled balloons attached together. Four jet planes circled near them, apparently in an effort to investigate the objects.

Old Southport Dom Rebuilt

The old dam site opposite Charlottetown, formerly owned by Mr. A. E. Morrison and located just west of the Southport wharf has been rebuilt and remodelled on 1952 lines.

Following the trend of the times a "by pass" had been dug inviting the entry of sea-run trout to the spring-fed land-locked waters of the dam.

The owners, Messrs. Sterling McKay and Willard Jordan have purchased additional land adjoining the pond, and will carry out a general program of improvement as time goes along.

The dam is really the sea front exit for the Government hatchery pond located on the Keppoch Road, and the waters of the hatchery spill over into a stream flowing into the constructed dam.

Georgetown Athlete With Navy "Frogmen"

(The following article, describing recent Navy Day demonstrations held at Esquimault, B. C., recently appeared in a Vancouver, B. C., newspaper and will be of interest to many Maritime citizens, who know Sub-Lieut. Maurice "Mike" DeLory, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. DeLory of Georgetown. Maurice a former Prince of Wales College student and now a Dalhousie University Medical Student, is well known throughout the Maritimes for his achievements in college football and boxing.)

The frogmen were, of course, the most intriguing part of yesterday's Navy Day demonstrations. Besides being one of the newer navy weapons, the underwater men are certainly the most spectacular.

All of the local divers are muscular young athletes, proficient swimmers who are almost as at home in the water as on land. They come from all walks of life and from all parts of Canada, including prairie communities which have never smelled the tang of the sea.

Typical is Lieut. Don Loney, commander of the explosive disposal unit, which is the group's correct name. Don played for the Ottawa Rough Riders back in his home town, the nation's capital. With a few freckles, he could pass for Van Johnson, but he is more at home in the water than before a camera.

Lieut. Loney explained that the roll of a divers is "to remove underwater obstacles and to remove them safe." But they have taken on other tasks, including the examination of leaky dikes along the flooded Red River during the Winnipeg flood in 1950. One of the Divers who swam ashore at Beacon Hill yesterday was Lieut-Cmdr. Phil Henry of Calgary. A reserve officer. Phil is a telephone man for the Alberta Government in civil life.

Other divers in the demonstration were Sub-Lieut. Maurice "Mike" DeLory of Georgetown, P. E. I., Dalhousie University Medical Student and Sub-Lieut. Rod Sutherland of Halifax, N. S. Victorians taking part in the demonstration were Cadet Val Hinch, an ex R. C. A. F. navigator, and PO. Colin Drew.

Underwater Suits

The frogmen wore three different types of underwater suits for the Beacon Hill Park display. Each swimmer carried 45 pounds of equipment, including a breathing lung which allows him to remain submerged for long periods, while carrying out underwater tasks. The frogmen prefer to be called divers. Sub-Lieut Pat Brodeur of Montreal explained, but the former name seems to be well rooted and here to stay.

The navy men were reluctant to discuss any details of the underwater work of the Canadian divers but the work of wartime frogmen is outlined in the various histories of the Second World War. They were used as demolition teams to dismantle mines, booby traps and beach defences before allied landings. Some rode torpedoes into enemy harbors, where they affixed the deadly missiles to the hulls of enemy ships.

As the assault landings are usually made at low tide when the beach obstacles are exposed, the frogmen normally went in with the initial assault waves to destroy the obstructions and allow the landing craft free access to the beach on a rising tide. The casualties were high, as these tactics meant clearing the beach under heavy enemy fire.

Had Heavy Casualties

On D-Day at Omaha beach, the frogmen lost 52 per cent of their number. On other beaches whole teams were lost, but the liberating armies got ashore.

To carry out their task, the frogmen wore heavy woolen underwear and a one-piece rubber suit, to which were added a face mask and rubber swim-fins. They carried a razor-sharp knife, waterproof watch and compass, a coiled sounding line and a plastic slate and pencil for taking notes. Breathing lungs were carried on all extensive operations. Local frogmen used similar equipment recently to affix underwater "explosive charges" to the hull of a warship as it tied up at its berth, following a training cruise.

Although our diving sailors insist that their work is defensive in nature, it appeared obvious to observers at the Navy Day demonstration that in the frogmen, Canada has a potent new weapon which could give a good account of itself should the need arise.

Enjoyable Visit To This Province

Rev. D. A. Kerr, Cornwall, Ontario, former padre with the 9th Highland Brigade of the Third Division of the Canadian Army, left over the weekend on return following a holiday spent here renewing old acquaintances. Rev. Mr. Kerr served in the Brigade which included the North Nova Scotia Highlanders with which unit so many Islanders were affiliated.

Honorary Capt. Kerr was with the Brigade from its formation and served in Northwest Europe from early in the invasion until the end of the war.

During his motor trip here he was accompanied by his mother and sister, also of Ontario.

COVEHEAD-BRACKLEY W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Chesley Hughes with fourteen members present. The meeting opened with hymn 500, "Take Time To Be Holy" and the Rev. Mr. Wilson then led in prayer.

The meeting took as the lesson for the evening, Psalm 1 "Meditation on Community Friendship" was read by Mrs. Lorne MacMillan and the Scripture reading from Romans, 12th chapter, was read by Miss Doris Brown "Friendship for sharing" was then read by Mrs. Orr MacCann and Mark, 12th chapter, verses 30-31, were read by Mrs. George Bell.

Mrs. Colin MacLure gave a very interesting reading on the "Ninety & Nine". An old poem brought up to date was then read by Mrs Gideon MacLaughlin and hymn 502 closed the devotional part of the meeting.

Mrs. Lewis MacCallum kindly invited the members to her home for the next meeting with Mrs. Gideon MacLaughlin in charge of the devotional. The word for the next roll call is "Love". Collection for the evening amounted to $4.50.

The meeting closed with the Mispah Benediction and a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. The remainder of the evening was spent in plans being made for the church tea.
