British Designer Features Styles

LONDON, July 28—A British fashion creator whose premises lie almost next door to the famous old church of St. George's in Hanover Square, is showing a collection which embraces all the types of suits and include both plain and fur-trimmed topcoats.

Among the daytime suits, and distinct from the classic tailleur, there is an interesting silhouette achieved by a juttied forward collar, a short jacket flat at front with a full back pleatum and flat fronted skirt with moderate fullness at the rear. This movement is shown typically in a dark red woolen suit with beaver fronts, collar and pointed yoke at back, which incidentally illustrates another feature of the collection—that of building up the suit or coat with flat fur as an integral part of the design.

Constructional interest is another interesting point. There is a brown hairy surfaced woolen suit trimmed with brown Persian lamb which repeats its jacket cuts in the skirt and gams, the latter in tunic effect, which shows this feature of workmanship particularly well.

The majority of winter coats are full-length ones, fitted in the bodice with moderate flare, frequently toward the back, in the skirt section. Yokes, sleeves, deep cuffs and convertible collars make use of Indian and Persian lamb and beaver. Some of these are combined with soft, tailored dresses in a lighter-weight version of the woolen coating.

For country wear there are tweed jacket suits and silk or wool skirts with big rough contrasting tweed topcoats. Dark brown over natural is a typical color scheme and here again full-length coats predominate although an occasional seven-eighth one with slight back flare is used.

The featured colors in the daytime models are soft heather purple, greens and black. Yellow is liked for skirts and accessories. For town wear the woollens are monotonous with surface interest in the way of ribs, clubs and hairs, while colorful mixture tweeds are liked for the country group.

This designer has a nice idea for next winter's evening suits. He puts a severely tailored jacket and ground length skirt in heavy black satin with a white pique blouse. The last is cut like a man's evening waistcoat at the back with an amusing contrast in the way of a front cut like flower petals which can be pulled out between the jacket lapels.

Believes Zoology Field For Women

NEW YORK, July 28.—(C. P.) : When Gloria Hollister, the yellow-haired girl who has been nearer the floor of the ocean than any other living woman, came back not long ago from the zoological expedition she headed to British Guiana, South America, she announced that nothing exciting happened.

That's all in the point of view, however. Miss Hollister, bred to adventure, thinks little of traveling over hundreds of miles of jungle—some of it never before seen by a white man—in a one-motor plane.

The zoologist who, though still in her 20's, is a member of the New York Zoological Society, said: "The rainy season began early this year so we hurried our studies in order to save several thousands of feet of film and photographs from being ruined by rain and dampness. We studied and photographed birds, flowers, animals and Indians. Since we could see only a short distance ahead of us when traveling in the jungle on foot, I found reconnaissance by an airplane invaluable in gaining a general knowledge and picture of the area."

Once, when the party of 20 was travelling by boat on a lonely river, they discovered on wakening on shore in the morning, that their boat had been sunk by the swollen torrents and heavy rains in the night. But it was raised and the party continued its journey.

Miss Hollister, whose expedition was conducted under the auspices of the New York Zoological Society, is heartily in favor of her profession as a woman's work.

"Zoology is an excellent field for girls, especially the laboratory side," she said.

COMES TO ME A SWEET ENCHANTMENT

Comes to me a sweet enchantment in the silence of the night, When the scenes of day have faded and its cares have taken flight; When again the moon is shining, as it shone so long ago

On the evenings of my childhood when the world was all aglow, With life's wonderment unfolding to the days that were to be; Looking forward to the future that is now a memory;

Where they live who here no longer move through living joys or cares Of their busy ways or humble, or their serious affairs.

But the same old moon is shining as it shone so long ago, Ere they journeyed from us onward from their merriment or woe; Over pasture land and meadow, and its pathway o'er the sea, Like a golden highway leading on to grand solemnity; Shining on our way so modern, as it shone upon the old, And the older yet and older as the ages onward rolled;

On who lived and felt as we do in their languishing days, In their loves and aspirations, In their angushes and tears.

In their mode of life, deportment, in their manners stern or mild, In their fashions or their passions, man and woman, youth or child, With their pagentry have vanished to the muteness of the past, With their glories in the shadow of a newer order cast.

They who lived as we are living—vital, noble, grave or true, Careless, idle, weak or evil, who have passed the portal through—

Did they come from only nothing, or to nothing did return, Or was life a stage or journey to an end beyond the bourne?

Orwell Head Farewells Dr. D. M. and Mrs. Sinclair

A delightful evening was spent on Tuesday, June 23rd when Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm D. MacDonald opened their beautiful home to the people of Orwell Head for the purpose of coming together to bid farewell to Rev. D. M. Sinclair and Mrs. Sinclair, who have since taken up work for the Master in Sydney, C. B.

Mr. R. C. MacLeod presided and after a few remarks called upon Mr. John A. Gillis, who came forward and read a farewell address, voicing the sentiments of the people of Orwell Head, and the sorrow occasioned by the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair to another part of the Master's vineyard. At the conclusion of the address, a gift in cash was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair by Master Lloyd MacDonald as a token of love and esteem from the people of Orwell Head. Mr. Sinclair replying on behalf of Mrs. Sinclair and himself thanked one and all for the great kindness extended during the time they had spent among them, and expressed the hope that his successor would receive the same loyalty and co-operation.

Remarks were expressed by several present that Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair were leaving the community where, by their faithful attendance at all meetings and their wise leadership, harmony had at all times prevailed. Rev. Mr. Weir also spoke of the cordial relations existing between Mr. Sinclair and himself.

Among the large gathering present were the members of the Gaelic Society of Orwell Head who contributed several Gaelic selections led by Mr. John S. Martin. Splendid bagpipe music was furnished by Mr. Jack MacKinnon. Mrs. Weir's singing was greatly appreciated, many hearing her for the first time at Orwell Head. Mrs. Gillis also sang. Mrs. MacDonald assisted by several of the ladies served delightful refreshments to all present. Later the company dispersed thanking Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald for the kind hospitality extended to all.

SULBURY, Ont., July 27—Palmaridge Falcons, Ontario soccer champions, advanced in their quest for the Dominion cup soccer title here tonight by defeating Montreal-Hamilton United, Quebec finalists, 1-0 in the final game of the Eastern Canadian series.

Falcons won the first game of the two-out-of-three series by a 2-0 count Friday night. Montreal came back to tie up the series Saturday night with a close 1-0 decision.

Both teams played superior soccer in tonight's contest. Rowarth scored the only goal of the game within two minutes of the opening whistle to give the Falcons a lead they never relinquished.

Falcons were without the services of "Red" Earley, the fast-stepping forward who has been doing most of the scoring for the Northern Ontario team lately. Earley's brother died here Sunday, Chris Earthing, who had not seen service in the series, was injected into the line-up. He played centre for the first period, and then moved to the rear-guard to be replaced by MacArthur on the line.

MR. PETER SINNOTT

There passed peacefully away at his home in Morell on July 9th Peter Sinnott at the mature age of eighty three years.

The late Mr. Sinnott was born in Morell and spent his life there. He was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic church and was frequently visited during his short illness by his pastor Rev. Joseph Rooney, who administered to him the last sad rites of his church.

Mr. Sinnott was twice married, his last wife predeceasing him five years ago.

There are left to mourn the loss of a loving father the following sons and daughters—Fannie, Mrs. Francis Walsh, and Edward in Edmonton; Daniel in Morell; Irene, Mrs. Herbert Simpson, Drumore; Eugene and Walter at home; of the ladies (the John D. Sinnott, Morell, and a sister Mrs. John Dougan, Morell.

His funeral which was largely attended was held from his late residence to St. Lawrence Church where requiem high mass was celebrated after which his remains were laid in the cemetery near by. The pall bearers were Messrs. Patrick Gallagher, John McInnis, George Byrne, Joseph Sinnott, John Kenny, Michael Donovan.

British Designer Features Styles

LONDON, July 28—A British fashion creator whose premises lie almost next door to the famous old church of St. George's in Hanover Square, is showing a collection which embraces all the types of suits and include both plain and fur-trimmed topcoats.

Among the daytime suits, and distinct from the classic tailleur, there is an interesting silhouette achieved by a juttied forward collar, a short jacket flat at front with a full back pleatum and flat fronted skirt with moderate fullness at the rear. This movement is shown typically in a dark red woolen suit with beaver fronts, collar and pointed yoke at back, which incidentally illustrates another feature of the collection—that of building up the suit or coat with flat fur as an integral part of the design.

Constructional interest is another interesting point. There is a brown hairy surfaced woolen suit trimmed with brown Persian lamb which repeats its jacket cuts in the skirt and gams, the latter in tunic effect, which shows this feature of workmanship particularly well.

The majority of winter coats are full-length ones, fitted in the bodice with moderate flare, frequently toward the back, in the skirt section. Yokes, sleeves, deep cuffs and convertible collars make use of Indian and Persian lamb and beaver. Some of these are combined with soft, tailored dresses in a lighter-weight version of the woolen coating.

For country wear there are tweed jacket suits and silk or wool skirts with big rough contrasting tweed topcoats. Dark brown over natural is a typical color scheme and here again full-length coats predominate although an occasional seven-eighth one with slight back flare is used.

The featured colors in the daytime models are soft heather purple, greens and black. Yellow is liked for skirts and accessories. For town wear the woollens are monotonous with surface interest in the way of ribs, clubs and hairs, while colorful mixture tweeds are liked for the country group.

This designer has a nice idea for next winter's evening suits. He puts a severely tailored jacket and ground length skirt in heavy black satin with a white pique blouse. The last is cut like a man's evening waistcoat at the back with an amusing contrast in the way of a front cut like flower petals which can be pulled out between the jacket lapels.

JUST LIKE TEACHER

Little Visitor (pointing to a large old portrait)—Whose picture is that? Little Hostess—She's my mamma's great aunt. I never heard much about her, but guess she was a school teacher. Little Visitor—Why? Little Hostess—See how her eyes follow us about.

Believes Zoology Field For Women

NEW YORK, July 28.—(C. P.) : When Gloria Hollister, the yellow-haired girl who has been nearer the floor of the ocean than any other living woman, came back not long ago from the zoological expedition she headed to British Guiana, South America, she announced that nothing exciting happened.

That's all in the point of view, however. Miss Hollister, bred to adventure, thinks little of traveling over hundreds of miles of jungle—some of it never before seen by a white man—in a one-motor plane.

The zoologist who, though still in her 20's, is a member of the New York Zoological Society, said: "The rainy season began early this year so we hurried our studies in order to save several thousands of feet of film and photographs from being ruined by rain and dampness. We studied and photographed birds, flowers, animals and Indians. Since we could see only a short distance ahead of us when traveling in the jungle on foot, I found reconnaissance by an airplane invaluable in gaining a general knowledge and picture of the area."

Once, when the party of 20 was travelling by boat on a lonely river, they discovered on wakening on shore in the morning, that their boat had been sunk by the swollen torrents and heavy rains in the night. But it was raised and the party continued its journey.

Miss Hollister, whose expedition was conducted under the auspices of the New York Zoological Society, is heartily in favor of her profession as a woman's work.

"Zoology is an excellent field for girls, especially the laboratory side," she said.

COMES TO ME A SWEET ENCHANTMENT

Comes to me a sweet enchantment in the silence of the night, When the scenes of day have faded and its cares have taken flight; When again the moon is shining, as it shone so long ago

On the evenings of my childhood when the world was all aglow, With life's wonderment unfolding to the days that were to be; Looking forward to the future that is now a memory;

Where they live who here no longer move through living joys or cares Of their busy ways or humble, or their serious affairs.

But the same old moon is shining as it shone so long ago, Ere they journeyed from us onward from their merriment or woe; Over pasture land and meadow, and its pathway o'er the sea, Like a golden highway leading on to grand solemnity; Shining on our way so modern, as it shone upon the old, And the older yet and older as the ages onward rolled;

On who lived and felt as we do in their languishing days, In their loves and aspirations, In their angushes and tears.

In their mode of life, deportment, in their manners stern or mild, In their fashions or their passions, man and woman, youth or child, With their pagentry have vanished to the muteness of the past, With their glories in the shadow of a newer order cast.

They who lived as we are living—vital, noble, grave or true, Careless, idle, weak or evil, who have passed the portal through—

Did they come from only nothing, or to nothing did return, Or was life a stage or journey to an end beyond the bourne?

Quebec Champs Beaten By Falcons

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

SULBURY, Ont., July 27—Palmaridge Falcons, Ontario soccer champions, advanced in their quest for the Dominion cup soccer title here tonight by defeating Montreal-Hamilton United, Quebec finalists, 1-0 in the final game of the Eastern Canadian series.

Falcons won the first game of the two-out-of-three series by a 2-0 count Friday night. Montreal came back to tie up the series Saturday night with a close 1-0 decision.

Both teams played superior soccer in tonight's contest. Rowarth scored the only goal of the game within two minutes of the opening whistle to give the Falcons a lead they never relinquished.

Falcons were without the services of "Red" Earley, the fast-stepping forward who has been doing most of the scoring for the Northern Ontario team lately. Earley's brother died here Sunday, Chris Earthing, who had not seen service in the series, was injected into the line-up. He played centre for the first period, and then moved to the rear-guard to be replaced by MacArthur on the line.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. PETER SINNOTT

There passed peacefully away at his home in Morell on July 9th Peter Sinnott at the mature age of eighty three years.

The late Mr. Sinnott was born in Morell and spent his life there. He was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic church and was frequently visited during his short illness by his pastor Rev. Joseph Rooney, who administered to him the last sad rites of his church.

Mr. Sinnott was twice married, his last wife predeceasing him five years ago.

There are left to mourn the loss of a loving father the following sons and daughters—Fannie, Mrs. Francis Walsh, and Edward in Edmonton; Daniel in Morell; Irene, Mrs. Herbert Simpson, Drumore; Eugene and Walter at home; of the ladies (the John D. Sinnott, Morell, and a sister Mrs. John Dougan, Morell.

His funeral which was largely attended was held from his late residence to St. Lawrence Church where requiem high mass was celebrated after which his remains were laid in the cemetery near by. The pall bearers were Messrs. Patrick Gallagher, John McInnis, George Byrne, Joseph Sinnott, John Kenny, Michael Donovan.

Hearse driver, Plus Walsh. May his soul rest in peace.

WORM WON'T BITE

MORDELAOC, Australia.—(CP)—It wasn't a case of the fish not biting—it was the worm this time. Mordealoc fishermen even dug a trench across a side street in an effort to catch the voracious animal.
