

Happenings of The Week

The Governor General and the Viscountess Alexander attended by Miss Ance Gibbs and Flight Lieutenant S. E. M. Milliken, were present at the luncheon in the Chateau Laurier arranged by the United Nations Association in Canada, at which Mr. Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the United Nations, was the speaker.

Margaret Truman made her European debut this week without an audience and then went to lunch with Winston Churchill. Miss Truman, whom the British press is calling "America's Princess Margaret", sang Church of England hymns at services in historic Westminster Abbey, and the few persons who could hear her didn't turn around to look.

She attended the services with Mrs. Walter S. Gifford, wife of the U. S. Ambassador. The blonde daughter of President Truman followed her father's instructions "to see as many cathedrals as possible" and toured the huge Gothic abbey in which British kings and queens have been crowned for centuries. After the services, Miss Truman and the Giffords drove to Churchill's country home at Chartwell for lunch with the former prime minister.

She was wearing a tweed suit, a white off-the-face hat and carried a short fur jacket. Her arrival aboard the liner "America" at Southampton on a European tour received front-page attention yesterday from the British press. Miss Truman said she viewed with alarm the crowded schedule prepared for her by the U. S. Embassy. "I hope they leave some time for sightseeing and going to the theatre," she said. She will visit the Tower of London and the Festival of Britain Exhibition, and she will attend a debate in the House of Commons.

A bouquet of Malayan and American orchids with Canadian and French roses was presented to Princess Elizabeth at the annual flower ball held in conjunction with the royal opening of the Chelsea Flower show. Other presentations were a corsage of pink Prince Charles' orchids, a woolly lamb for Princess Anne, a toy electric stove and two dozen toy soldiers in guards and household cavalry uniforms for Prince Charles. The gifts for her children were presented to the Princess on behalf of the St. Loyes Training College (for disabled persons, in whose aid the ball was given. More than $65 was raised for the college by the sale of flowers and seven bouquets, including one at the top price of 10 guineas, went to Princess Elizabeth's table.

Mrs. F. W. Hyndman and Mrs. Emma Holman have been in Halifax, where they attended the Musical Festival in which their daughters Nancy and Helen took part.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Hard To Explain

Daughter's Existence Two-Year Secret From Woman's In-Laws

DEAR MISS DIX: My problem is not a usual one, but I'm hoping you have a practicable solution to it. I married when very young and within a short time obtained a divorce, and the custody of my daughter. Six years later, I met a fine man and for the first time re-married. This man's home was quite far from where we were so it was impossible for me to meet his family until after we were married. My husband was the youngest child, and I did wonder how his mother would react to his marrying a woman with a child. We were only at his home a short while, and the entire time was spent just getting acquainted. Somehow I never found the right moment to tell them about myself, as I am naturally a little reserved. My daughter was in school at the time and I had left her with my mother. The point is, we left and as of now (a year and a half later), his mother still doesn't know about my daughter. Now I just don't know how to break it to her, or explain the delay. I am reluctant to go back to see them and they are beginning to wonder why we don't come. Although we live several hundred miles apart we could manage a visit once a year. My husband is everything a man should be and he and my daughter are inseparable. He doesn't want to go home without us, and has left the de-

ANOTHER DRUG TO RAISE DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS

I wrote recently of the comedian who told his partner in the act that he was taking cocaine. When his partner asked him why he took the drug, he replied, "I just job the needle into my arm and I think I've paid my rent."

All over the world today we are learning that drugs to relieve pain and grief are being used more than ever before in history. I have written before about the drugs known as the barbiturals drugs of which phenobarbital is likely the one most used. It has revolutionized the treatment of epilepsy so that together with decreasing the use of tablet salt and liquids, many epileptics are enabled to remain free or nearly free of attacks, or seizures, as they are called.

However, like other helpful things in life, too many individuals are using these quieting drugs and poisoning is not uncommon. Most physicians believe that when the quieting drug is used in the quantity and at the times prescribed by the physician, it is preferred to having the patient lie sleepless in pain night after night.

Another useful drug that gives the discouraged individual a boost or lift is amphetamine, with the trade name of Benzedrine Sulfate. It is being used with success in cases of fatigue, despondency and alcoholism. A more recent stimulant for fatigue is known as

Our Trip To Europe

The next morning we were on our way to Venice, Italy. The train trip through this section was very hot and crowded and naturally everybody was speaking a language that we didn't understand. On this train, like most of the others, there was no diner, and the only way to get food was to buy it at the station from people who sell refreshments on the platform. I managed to buy a roll, which looked very good, but which had been filled with a slice of garlic bologna. In trying to remove the meat, inconspicuously I managed to get a huge grease spot on my skirt but at least I was able to eat the roll and stave off my hunger. As we approached the Italian border we had our first glimpse of the terraced vineyards and olive orchards, so abundant in Italy. As there was a festival on in Venice, the city was overcrowded and we were only able to get accommodation with the help of an Italian we met on the train, who succeeded after trying several hotels.

As it was evening when we arrived, all the banks were closed and the only money we had was Swiss francs. This money was not accepted in Italian restaurants, so thanks to our Italian friend again, we were able to eat that night. A little about Italian food—as we only had a vague

The Stars Say

By Genevieve Kemble

For Tomorrow

A VERY lively and stimulating day, with much pleasure, sociability, hospitality and gaiety. While this could find expression in purely festive channels at the same time there may be some definitely creative or constructive accomplishment, provided the stimulated energies and initiative be channelled into practical progressive avenues. Contacts with higher-ups could be profitable.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, may anticipate a year of constructive effort, with energies and initiative under fine stimuli for accomplishment. Efficient work in connection with influential persons could seal worthwhile contacts and promote lasting friendships, with good will and high achievement of mutual advantage. Keep practical and energetic as well as aspiring and sociable for best results.

For Day After Tomorrow

The astrological forecast is for an auspicious and pleasant day in affairs of study, contacts with superiors, promotion, and generally happy relations. While the purely aspirational and spiritual faculties are highly stimulated at the same time the festive and profitable ambitions and engagements are also under happy stimulus.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is, may count upon a progressive and active state of affairs, with practical application, stimulated energies and enterprise finding pleasant, enduring and rich rewards. Stalwart drives with ardent enthusiasm and objectives are bound to find due recognition and worth while emoluments coming from influential sources. Work toward such benign objective, with high purpose and confidence. Do not shrink responsibilities nor sidestep publicity.

Good-night

Q. Does a hostess invite her guest "to dinner" or "for dinner"? A. She invites her guest to dinner, although she may have chickened for dinner. A cannibal might have his guest for dinner.

Q. What kind of card should one enclose with a wedding gift? A. A visiting card, or a plain white card with one's name on it.
