Atlantic Business Students Conference

Senior Business student Kevin MacCarville hit the spotlight Saturday night as he won the raceoff for the intercollegiate Driving Championship.

Kevin is now the proud holder of the fastest time the trials have ever had and for the second straight race he won by a narrow margin of a horse's nose. He will represent P.E.I. in the national finals in Nova Scotia in the near future and we wish him luck.

In speaking with our intramural director Marg Huising, I get the impression that she has big things planned for our Business students as far as sports are concerned. All interested students will see posters throughout our building and if you have any questions please let us know.

As you read this article you now know that the first day's events of the Atlantic Business Students Conference have taken place and hopefully you were fortunate to have participated. If not, don't worry because the big day takes place tomorrow starting at 9 A.M. in the Steele Building. We will have two guest speakers, namely Frank Callaghan, president of D.B. & J. and Eric Rector from the Mercantile Bank in Saint John. In the afternoon we have a longer session with three guest speakers, discussing solutions to the many problems faced by a small business operator. The lectures begin at 2 P.M., also in the Steele Building.

There is a wind-up party for the delegates at the Wandlyn in the evening so Business students, why not drop in and enjoy yourselves.

We are in the process of finalizing details for our next Business

Society party so if you have any suggestions as far as entertainment or dates then let us know.

I guess students don't have to read in the newspaper that it's mid-term time to realize this fact but those of you who do then good luck. As usual, Octoberfest and mid-terms run concurrently which does present a problem.

Students don't like to miss social events but the books are important, I realize the Social Committee has their hands full as it is but I feel they would get better participation from the student population if they ran the events earlier in the month. Since I am not fully aware of any reasoning they have, I probably am speaking about something which can't be done.

In recent articles I have taken a few shots at John Neville regarding his sports accomplishments but they are only in fun and he can't help the fact that he is scared of horses.

I have been approached on numerous occasions by Dr. Edmonds concerning a Debating Society and as soon as we wind up our conference the executive is going to take a serious look at organizing a debate. We would like all interested Business students who want to be a part of a Business Society debating team and show their superiority over the Arts and any other Weaker faculty to let us know. This should stir up a bit of excitement on campus.

See you next week.
