Rock Phosphate As A Fertilizer In P. E. I.

OTTAWA (Special)—Experiments at the Ch'town Experimental Farm during the past 5 years, in which hyperphosphate and superphosphate were compared as sources of phosphorus, have shown very little difference in the effect of these materials on yields of crops when the two materials are applied in sufficient quantity to supply equal amounts of readily available phosphorus.

Soil specialist, G.B. Whiteside, says results indicate slightly higher yields of swedes and oats with superphosphate, but a slightly higher yield of hay with hyperphosphate. The differences in yields, however, are less than 1/2 ton of swedes, 2.0 bushels of oats and less than 1/4 of hay per acre.

The slightly higher yield of hay with the hyperphosphate may indicate a greater residual effect with hyperphosphate than with superphosphate. The slightly higher yields of swedes and oats with the superphosphate may also have caused an indirect reduction in hay yields when compared with the hyperphosphate plots.

The results of this experiment show that the use of hyperphosphate as a source of phosphorus for crops in P.E.I. will depend to a large extent upon the relative cost of the material as compared with the cost of superphosphate. At the present time superphosphate is cheaper considering yield increases obtained.

OTTAWA (CP) — The current issue of the RCMP quarterly records a new type of traffic accident—a collision between a plane and an Eskimo dog team and sled.

The incident occurred Feb. 20, 1957, at Tuktoyaktuk, N.W.T., on the shore of the Beaufort sea.

Pilot Wiggo Bjorne Norwang landed his Cessna on sea ice. Snowdrifts caused the plane to veer rapidly to the left toward the point of a small island.

At the same time, around the island came a dog team and toboggan driven by Eskimo Willie Sam Katigayok. Aboard the toboggan were his wife and month-old son, Joe David.

At sight of the plane, the dog team became excited and broke into a run so that the driver was unable to control them. The aircraft, meanwhile, did not respond to the controls though it was travelling slowly. It collided with the rear left end of the sledge. Katigayok's wife was sitting near the front of the toboggan carrying the baby strapped to her back. Both were only slightly hurt. The driver was unhurt.
