Where famous faces voice their opinions

In order to give equal time to the sexes, this week we ask "What (the hell) is the problem with women?"

Chris LeClair, 3rd year Business

"I don't have any problem with women."

Kelly VanBuskirk, 2nd year Arts

"I don't think there are any problems with women except for the fact that feminists are too paranoid."

Simon Berge, 1st year Pre-Vet

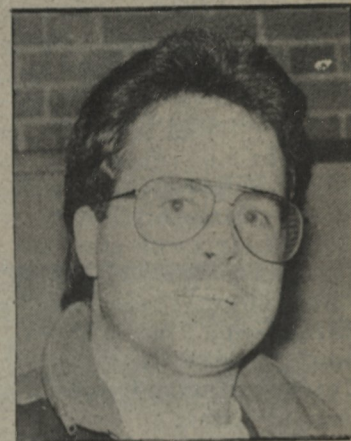

"They're too pampered, they're too egotistical, and they lack initiative. 'Course there are some good points — they're inventive and they're daring."

Jennifer Ellis, 2nd year Bio

"Men!!"

Troy Handren, 4th year Chemistry

"There's nothing wrong with mine — it's everyone else that has problems!"

O'Keefe boycott at Concordia may be over already

Montreal (CUP) — The boycott of Carling O'Keefe beer at Concordia may be short-lived.

The Concordia student council voted to boycott O'Keefe products last January because of the company's ties to South Africa.

But Rothmans Canada Inc., which owns 50.1 per cent of O'Keefe and is partially owned by the Rembrandt Group, a South African corporation, is selling its interest in O'Keefe.

Elders IXL Ltd., an Australian based conglomerate, has agreed to buy Rothmans' 50.1 per cent control of O'Keefe. If the sale is finalized and the new owners are clean of financial ties to South Africa, motion will be presented to Concordia council board members to end the boycott.

Council co-president Scott White said they will wait until the sale is completed before holding a vote to end the boycott.

"Assuming there's nothing wrong with the new company, a motion will be presented and the boycott will be over," he said.

O'Keefe official Gary Chilvers said

In the announcement "Honourary Degrees awarded" in the March 12 issue, the name of Dr. Dennis Howell, former Dean of the Ontario Veterinary College, was omitted.

Dr. Howell will be one of the five people to receive honorary degrees this spring at Convocation.
