

One by One.

Though from the boughs to which they've long been clinging,
 These autumn leaves are dropping one by one,
 Yet from their dust new forms of beauty springing.
 Shall smile again in summer's gentle sun.

Though one by one the pearly drops of morning,
 From drooping flowers on viewless pinions rise,
 We'll see them yet the gorgeous clouds adorning
 With glowing arches of celestial dyes.

Though one by one the stars are fading slowly
 That all night long kept vigil in the sky,
 The distant mountain peaks, like prophets high proclaim that morning's light and song are nigh.

Though with slow step goes forth the sower weeping,
 And on earth's lap his precious treasure leaves,
 Yet comes the harvest, with its joyous reaping,
 When shall be gathered home the ripened sheaves.

Though one by one the friends we fondly cherish
 Withdraw from ours the cold and trembling hand,
 And leave us sorrowful, they do not perish—
 They yet shall greet us in a fairer land.

Yes, from all climes, where'er the faithful slumber
 'Neath scorching suns, or Arctic snow and frost,
 Staunch they'll rise in myriads without number;
 All, all, shall meet—there shall not one be lost.

—Chambers' Journal.

The Art of Seeing.

In everyday life it is much more important to be an accurate observer than a mere book learner. I have frequently seen the latter made to blush for their deficiencies by the most unlearned, says a correspondent in an English contemporary, for in a contest between eyes and no eyes, eyes have generally got the best of it. Nature has given us such an inexhaustible store of interest that those who go through life without "seeing" lose much of the zest of it. The savage, who necessarily depends upon his keen eye and quick ear, cultivates those faculties in an extraordinary degree; for does he not see indications and hear sounds which to an unpracticed observer would be utterly unintelligible.

So also with all persons who live near the heart of nature. The English shepherd, while perhaps ignorant of the very formation of the alphabet, stores up a fund of interesting knowledge, derived entirely from observation. He can give you simple, interesting astronomical facts, which might astonish a scientist, as well as trustworthy information on natural history and even botany. His pursuits lead him to study nature in all its varied phases; it is in this way that he can tell you that the arrival of the swallow may be expected on the 11th of April, and not later than the 14th. He will tell you the best time for noticing the flight of birds, and that nearly every bird has a different manner of flying, and that each has wings adapted to its different habits; for instance, those like the swallow, who catch their food while in the air, have long, pointed wings, while rounded short wings are only for birds who have slow and short flight. He will also tell you how the tiny pimpernel warns him to house his lambs by closing tightly its petals on the slightest indication of rain; and thousands of other simple facts which to a student of nature are most interesting.

Thus one may possess everything in the way of scholarship, but if he or she have that alone, those who are unlearned but observing will often make them feel very small. I would, therefore, urge my readers to cultivate the art of seeing or observing; there is nothing like seeing things for ourselves. Our ideas become fresher, more natural, and more in unison with latter day tastes when they are formed from observation. Nature's book is the one wherein we find the richest, the most varied, and the most inexhaustible subjects for thought. Whole pages of lessons may be learned from the very stones we walk on, and the most insignificant of God's creation possesses an interest unknown to those who go through life without "seeing."

Good Nature.

Chang King was President of the High Court of Criminal Cases, and being obliged to make on the following day his report to the Emperor upon an affair of consequence which fell out in the evening, he called for a secretary, and drew up the writings, which employed him until midnight. Having finished his papers, he was thinking to take repose, when the secretary, by accident, struck the candle and threw it down. The fire caught the papers burnt part of them, and tallow spoiled the rest. The secretary was exceedingly sorrowful, and fell upon his knees to ask forgiveness for the offences. "It is an accident," said the President mildly; "arise, and let us begin anew."

MRS. SOPHIA POTTER'S

Bone Rheumatic Liniment

It is a fact worth knowing that Mrs. Sophia Potter's Bone Rheumatic Liniment cannot be excelled for removing pain and soreness. It is no worthless trash, as some may suppose, simply because they have been imposed upon by others but is positively the "King of Pain." Here throat cannot stand before its power. All we ask is a trial that you may be convinced of the truth of our statement. Our experience is that one bottle tried also sells many more.

See circular for particulars and testimonials, and try a bottle—it will not fail to do all that is promised.
