Queen Mother

There was the children's party when she was five at which she first met Albert, son of King George V. There was her 14th birthday, not a very happy one, because it was celebrated on the day that Britain entered the First World War.

There was her wedding in 1923, the birth of her daughter Elizabeth in 1926, Margaret in 1927. Then, in 1935, when she was 35 years old, came the sensational abdication of Edward VIII, a startling stroke of fate which turned her shy husband Albert into King George VI and herself into the Queen Consort.

Her 52nd birthday, last year, was her saddest, for her "Dear Bertie" was dead.

The smile vanished. But only for a while. Tuesday it shone out again.

Queen Mother Elizabeth returned to London Monday from Sandringham, the royal home in East Anglia where her husband died. The Queen was her first visitor Tuesday at Clarence House, followed an hour later by the two royal children.

The Duke of Edinburgh, her son-in-law, sent birthday wishes from Cowes, on the south coast, where he is sailing during regatta week there.

Prisoner Exchange

being moved into the tents for quick medical check.

In charge of the sickbay was Cmdr. H. Todde Stratford, of Gastonia, N. C.

The stretcher patients were taken quickly into the tent.

All the men on stretchers were covered with light blue blankets with Chinese lettering.

The second contingent contained no Americans.

Many of those men were South Koreans.

Some were so weak they had to be helped from the truck.

The third truck in the second contingent held mostly ailing South Korean soldiers, who were helped down by the big U.S. Marines.

RoKs Impassive

The RoKs showed little expression. Their attitude was in contrast to the demonstrativeness of the American and other Allied sick and wounded who managed smiles.

As the American and other UN ailing were taken into the medical tents a big Marine officer told them, "we're glad to have you back."

Within the next five weeks almost 87,000 men, 12,763 Allied, including 14 Canadians, and 74,000 Communists—will be exchanged.

Of these only 3,313 are Americans and there was no accounting for some 8,300 others still listed as missing in action.

The exchange, known as "operation Big Switch", culminated more than 20 months of bitter negotiations during a stalemate war that was halted nine days ago.

Among the other nationalities which the Reds were turning over this first day were 250 South Koreans, 26 British, 23 Turks, 12 Filipinos, seven Colombians, seven French and one each from Greece, Australia, Belgium, and South Africa.

The United Nations command in turn is handing over 2,400 ailing North Korean and Chinese prisoners and 360 sick and wounded.

The exchange point, freshly bulldozed, and its four small reception tents was first sight of the free world for the returning Allied prisoners.

Representatives of each country were on hand to welcome the returning men and speak to them in their native tongues.

The biggest crowd on hand were the representatives of the world press.

Helicopter crews stood by to fly the seriously sick and wounded to the 121st evacuation hospital near Seoul.

Truck convoys were set to roll the ailing bodied repatriates down special roads 12 miles to Freedom Village, near Munsan, where they will be deloused, given a quick medical check and outfitted in fresh new uniforms.

South Koreans will be processed at nearby Liberty Village and the British will be handled at Camp Britannia.

May Talk to Press

At Munsan American soldiers wishing to talk to newspaper men may do so. The 8th army made it plain Monday night that no one will be barred from the interview point unless he is sick or says that he does not want to see the press. During the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners last April, prisoners suspected of having been indoctrinated or brainwashed by the Reds were not allowed to see the press.

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, the 8th army commander, was on hand to greet the first repatriates personally. In a special booklet prepared for the returning men, he had assured them that the 8th army would "do everything in its power to speed you on your way back to your home and families."

"All our resources are at your disposal to make your stay with us as brief and as comfortable as possible," he said.

The prisoners were all cautioned to "safeguard military information, protect your fellow soldiers, your family and your country," in talking to persons after their release.

The first group of returning prisoners reached Kaesong, the Red truce base six miles west of Panmunjom Monday night. By Tuesday possibly 2,000 were there.

On the Allied side, the UN command had moved up more than 8,000 Communist prisoners to a camp near Panmunjom from stockades on Koje and Cheju islands off South Korea.

At last reports there had been no major demonstrations by the Communist prisoners although many of the Chinese ripped and tore their newly issued exchange uniforms.

A team of 30 Communist Red Cross representatives, who crossed south of the demarcation line Tuesday for the first time, was whisked to Seoul and Pusan by helicopter and transport planes to visit Red prisoners.

Offer From Gen. Chiang

Even as the Communist Red Cross men arrived in the south, Chinese Nationalist headquarters on Formosa disclosed that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had sent a letter to 14,500 Chinese prisoners in Korea who have refused repatriation. Chiang promised to see that they are admitted to Formosa if they refused to return to their homelands.

Red persuasion teams will interview these reluctant Chinese and 7,800 North Koreans who also do not want to go home under terms of the truce agreement.

The reluctant 22,300 will be placed under the jurisdiction of a five-nation repatriation commission headed by India.

An advance Indian party was due to arrive in Korea Aug. 9.

The administrative said of the truce was completely overshadowed by the dramatic prisoner exchange.

Swedish Maj-Gen. Seven Grafstrom said Tuesday he was hopeful the four-nation supervisory commission can meet its Saturday target date for sending inspection teams into North and South Korea.

The watchdog teams will be formed by Swedish, Swiss, Polish and Czech army officers. They will see what movements of men and supplies from 10 sea, rail and airports in North and South Korea do not exceed truce limitations.

Agrees To Discuss German Settlement

MOSCOW, (Reuters) — Russia has agreed to discuss a German settlement at a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers in a note delivered Tuesday to the United States, Britain and France, it was announced today.

Tass issued the texts of the American, British and French notes to the Soviet government, suggesting a meeting of the four foreign ministers, delivered to Soviet embassies in Washington, London and Paris on July 15, and the Soviet reply note delivered Tuesday to the three powers' embassies in Moscow.

ELECTORS OF KING'S

After August 10th let us be able to feel proud of this little County of ours.

Let us be able to boast that our election WAS a clean election.

WILL YOU CO-OPERATE? SURE YOU WILL!

The King's County Progressive Conservative Association feels that knowing the offences is probably your best protection against committing any of them. Here, then, in summary form, is a list of offences under "The Canada Election Act."

THE OFFENCES OF BRIBERY

- 1. Giving money, etc., to any elector to induce him to vote or refrain from voting.
2. Receiving money etc., for voting or refraining from voting, BEFORE, DURING, or AFTER the election.
3. Giving or promising employment to elector to induce him to vote.

THE OFFENCES OF TREATING

- 1. Providing food, drink, etc., BEFORE, DURING, or AFTER election for purpose of influencing elector to vote.
2. ACCEPTING food, drink, etc., referred to in the preceding clause.

THE OFFENCES OF PERSONATION

- 1. Having voted once, applying for another ballot at the same election.
2. Voting or ATTEMPTING to vote knowing that he is disqualified from voting.

Electors may pay their own fares to go to vote, but the hiring of cars by the Candidate or his workers is expressly prohibited. REMEMBER--the person who lets his car out for pay is subject to a fine.

The Conservative Workers in this County will be following these regulations to the letter and will also be on the alert to see that everyone else does.

Please do not take a chance on August 10th. Many of the offences carry with them a maximum penalty of a $2,000 fine or a 2 year prison sentence, or both, plus a loss of voting rights for 7 years.

WE KNOW YOU WILL CO-OPERATE HOWEVER YOU VOTE OBEY THE LAW

Inserted by the King's County Progressive Conservative Association.
