"THE CARIBOO TRAIL" AT CAPITOL, SUMMERSIDE

—Actionful, historical fare is promised by the Capitol Theatre with its next announced attraction, "The Cariboo Trail", due to open Thursday. Starring Randolph Scott with George "Gabby" Hayes as co-star, and filmed in the naturally hued tints of Cinecolor, "Cariboo Trail" represents another major outdoor drama from Nat Holt, producer of "Canadian Pacific" and "Fighting Man of the Plains," two of last year's outstanding films of his class.

Holt's policy is to invest his offerings with as much of the sheer spectacle and breath-taking beauty of the great outdoors as possible. He feels audiences of western-laid films expect this. In "The Cariboo Trail" the veteran producer has admitted his attempt to outdo himself.

When actual location shooting in the British Columbian Cariboo country proved unfeasible, Holt settled for similar country along the Continental Divide in the Colorado Rockies for principal shooting.

The drama Holt staged in front of these scenic highlights is one of both a cattle drive and a gold rush. In the fabulous wilderness country known as the Cariboo, some of the most rugged mountain and woodland country on the continent, Holt has uncovered a previously untold epic of the Pacific Northwest. It depicts the conflict between those who seek to exploit a land for gold and those who believe in the land and the wonders it can produce, for the lasting wealth it can provide a nation.
