GIVE 'EM FITS!

THAT'S just what we're going to do, give everyone who deals with us fits, and GOOD FITS too. We have leased the Shop lately occupied by Mr. Horace Hazard, in the Cameron Block, and have as fine a line of goods in Scotch, English and Canadian Tweeds and Worsteds as was ever shown in this city; and what's better still, we are going to give the BIGGEST BARGAINS in Custom-Made Clothing that have ever been given here.

We guarantee to give the public the same satisfaction they have received from us in the past, and much better prices.

Eyes of Blue.

O her eyes were blue,
That laughing mirth,
And all she said
Was "Good day, kind sir!"
But the memory of those eyes
Of heavenly blue

HOW TO SEE CHICAGO.

INTERESTING INFORMATION FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR TOURIST.

Points of Interest That Are Worth Visiting—How to Reach the Fair Grounds. Hotel Accommodations and Expenses. Places of Amusement.

What to do and which way to turn first on landing in Chicago will be the puzzle to the majority of visitors.

The first step in reaching the exposition grounds in Jackson park from downtown Chicago. The distance is seven miles from city hall, which is within a few squares of the depots of the leading railroads. The elevated road gives the quickest and most direct route to the exposition grounds. The fare is 5 cents. The downtown terminus is at Congress street, 12 to 15 minutes' walk from city hall. Running time from Congress street to Jackson park, 38 minutes.

The Illinois Central railroad will carry passengers to the grounds for 35 cents the round trip. The depot is on Michigan avenue.

The Lake Michigan boats will carry passengers to the exposition pier for 35 cents the round trip. They leave the heart of the city via Wabash avenue and turn on a loop through Lake and State streets.

Chicago is divided into three geographical divisions known in local parlance as the "West Side," "North Side" and "South Side." The South Side, with the Michigan, Calumet and Prairie avenues gives up to the homes of the millionaire element, harbors Chicago's aristocracy of wealth. The exposition is in the South Side district; so are the Auditorium, the courthouse, post-office, the principal clubs and the Art Institute. The great thoroughfares of the South Side in the central section of the city are Wabash and Michigan avenues.

The West Side comprises many fine parks and avenues, and is ordinarily considered one-half of Chicago's population. Madison street is the central thoroughfare of the West Side. The North Side includes Lincoln park, the homes of many millionaires, a long stretch of the Lake Shore drive, the archiepiscopal palace, the Fenwick obelisk, the monument of Long John Wentworth and the Northwestern university, the highest seat of learning in the state of Illinois.

A system of parks and gardens encircles the city. The parks cover 1,870 acres; the boulevards extend 80 miles. Each of the city divisions above noted has its own system of street cars. The City Railway company operates the South Side system, consisting of cable and horse roads. The North Side is controlled by the North Chicago company, which runs both cable and horse cars. The West Chicago company monopolizes the West Side with horse and cable cars.

The hotel accommodations of Chicago and those suburbs easy of access include about 2,000 houses of all grades. Nearly 800 of these have been built specially for World's fair patrons and are in the vicinity of the exposition grounds. The new hotels, $1,000,000 for construction, and with few exceptions are of brick, stone and iron. Heretofore the regular prices in the Chicago hotels have ranged from $5 down to $2 a day. Thousands of private houses in all parts of the city are advertising lodgings and meals for exposition patronage.

People who wish to economize will doubtless prefer to save time and money by lodging in the district around Fair park. The accommodations there now cost nearly $1,000,000 for construction, and with few exceptions are of brick, stone and iron. Heretofore the regular prices in the Chicago hotels have ranged from $5 down to $2 a day. Thousands of private houses in all parts of the city are advertising lodgings and meals for exposition patronage.

A later issue of the same paper says: The funeral of the late C. D. McLaine took place at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, corner of First and Gibbs streets, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon under most impressive auspices. At 2 o'clock the remains were conveyed from the deceased's late residence, No. 408 Corbett street, to the church, where the features were exposed to view until the hour for services.

The remains were dressed in full regimental uniform, and encased in a black casket ornamented with long bars of silver on either side. On the heavy silver plate was the simple inscription, "C. D. McLaine, died May 1, 1893, aged 31 years, 6 months and 2 days." The casket was covered with banks of flowers, arranged in beautiful designs. Some of them were sent from the S. and one from Walla Walla.

The services were conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. Thomas B. B. B. whose remarks were exceedingly beautiful and impressive.

It was in this church that the deceased was married about two years ago. Rev. Arthur J. Brown, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and chaplain of the regiment, assisted in the services. Aside from the military participants in the services, the members of Samarian Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which the deceased was a member and noble grand, and Portland Lodge of Masasons, and his fellow knights of Pythias also performed the rites of their respective orders.

Shortly after three o'clock the funeral procession started to Odd Fellows' Cemetery at Riverside. Aside from three funeral cars, which were filled with friends of the family, the remains were followed by over forty carriages containing the immediate relatives, the guard of honor, officers and members of the various lodges mentioned, and the pallbearers. The latter were: Capt. L. C. Farrer, Capt. A. J. C. B. E., Lieut. D. J. Moore, C. A. Macrum, W. F. McCaw, and J. W. Newkirk.

The guard of honor consisted of two sergeants, two corporals, one musician, and twenty privates of Company G under

THE AUDITORIUM.

The question of an expense budget is now the all important one for fair visitors. They must be prepared to pay for necessities, extra and amusements depends on the tastes and habits of the individual. Three New Yorkers who are planning a trip to Chicago recently compared their estimates of expenses. One of them had had much experience as a sightseer and was at the summit. His estimate is in the column headed "Old Stager." Another has lived in Chicago, and the third is a stranger to that city. Their items and totals are as follows:

	Old Stager.	Chicago.	Stranger.
Lodgings, three days...	$3 00	$4 50	$6 to $8
Meals, three days...	4 00	5 50	6 00
Car fare, three days...	1 00	1 00	1 20
Admission, catalogue, guides, etc., three days	4 80	4 50	5 00
Total	$14 80	$15 50	$12 to $14

The gate fee will be 50 cents, and the admission to the several departments 10 to 25 cents. Economy of time and cost of living has been taken into account in limiting the sojourn to three days.

Death of C. D. McLaine.

HE WAS DESERVEDLY POPULAR—AN IMPOSING FUNERAL.

(Portland Oregonian, May 2)

C. D. McLaine died at his residence on Corbett Street at 10:30 yesterday forenoon. He had an attack of pneumonia last December, which left him in a very weak condition, and in hope of regaining his health he went to Southern California, accompanied by his wife, and after Christmas he suffered a relapse there, and for a time his condition was considered very critical. He was then brought back to Portland by Mr. Frank Hachney, and as soon as possible brought him home, arriving here about two months ago. Since that time he steadily failed, and heart trouble finally set in. All the skill of physicians was of no avail and yesterday the end came.

Mr. McLaine was a native of Prince Edward Island, and was 32 years of age. He came to this city about six years ago, and has ever since been connected with the Electric Light Company, and on the organization of the Portland General Electric Company was promoted to the situation of assistant general manager. He was a very competent official, and had the full confidence of the company and was a general favorite with all. He was connected with the First Regiment, O. N. G., for several years and had for a sometime filled the position of adjutant. He took a great interest in athletic sports and was an active member of the Portland Rowing Club, of which he was at one time captain. He was a member of Portland Lodge of Free Masons, and Samarian Lodge of O. O. F., of which he was some time ago elected noble grand. He was a gentle, pleasant, whole-souled man, bright, active and energetic in whatever he undertook. The funeral services will take place Wednesday afternoon at the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

A later issue of the same paper says: The funeral of the late C. D. The guard of honor consisted of two sergeants, two corporals, one musician, and twenty privates of Company G under command of First Lieutenant George T. Willett. The members of the guard were dressed in full uniform with side arms, and all wore crests. The members of the regiment assembled at the Armory under a half masted flag at 1:15, and then proceeded to the church in a body by special car. The services at the grave were very impressive, and when all that was mortal of this promising young man was laid to rest, he lay in a heap of flowers, the tokens of love and esteem borne the deceased by all who knew him. Never before in Portland has so young a man been followed to his last resting place by such a large congregation of mourners.

[The deceased was a son of J. A. McLaine, E. q., of St. Peter's Bay.]
