FINAL TALK

Compulsory Arbitration Is Proposed At Lecture

Dr. Herbert Johnston of the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Indiana, last night proposed that compulsory arbitration be reached to whatever degree is possible.

The primary function of authority or law, he said, was to point out the means that are to be adopted to attain the common end, and the secondary function is to provide the power needed to enforce compliance with its directives.

By drawing a parallel between society and business Dr. Johnston suggested that business firms are also societies on a smaller scale and have the same rights and privileges and independence of thought as the family and the state, but are also subject to the same legal justice which applies to a private enterprise as well as to private citizens.

"Some conflict is inevitable and even desirable," he said. "But when it threatens to tear the larger society to pieces, that society must either suppress the conflict or die."

Management and labour have a common end, he said, and more emphasis should be put on this fact.

"Our tradition of individualism has led us to see companies and industries, as it were, horizontally, with labour and management as conflicting elements. There is some truth in this view. But a more realistic as well as a more hopeful outlook would lead us to see companies and industries vertically, as societies involving the cooperation of management and labour toward the common end that makes them one company or one industry."

"Labour and management relations are where authority or law comes in, the speaker said. He suggested that if there are several possible means of attaining a common good, and if no unanimity can be reached, then

"some authority will be needed to assure the united action by which alone the common good may be reached to whatever degree is possible."

main distinct in their functions and in their interests. But this distinction remains subordinate to their community of function and of interest in the same economic society. They are both the same and different. For too long we have overemphasized the difference and underemphasized the sameness."

Dr. Johnston felt that to resort to strike or lockout is "to resort to an essentially irrational and inhuman means of solving human disputes. The good of the economy demands a better way of handling these disputes," he said.

Strikes, he said, are really against the consumer, not the employer and he suggested that the public has suffered too long from these civil wars.

He said, "Wherever the fault may originally lie, strikes are too often accompanied by violence that amount to open revolt and an invitation to anarchy. For this additional reason the compulsory arbitration of the issues involved in at least some labour disputes may be imperative."

Dr. Johnston suggested that the better path would involve increasing the consciousness of community in the economic segment of North American life.

"Admittedly," he said, "the difficulties are enormous. Yet the thing should not be impossible, for in fact the economy is a society in which competition, though indispensable, is needed as a means to the achievement of what is ultimately a common end."

"And in the pursuit of that goal there is no place for large-scale stoppages of essential services nor for the violence that too often accompanies them. Either the economic community itself will achieve greater cooperation or the government will quite properly impose it. There is still time, but it is running out."

Dr. Johnston leaves SDU today to return to Notre Dame.

The president, Clair Mayhew who was introduced by Wyman Waddell.

Mr. Hamilton briefly outlined the aims and purposes of the Protestant Men Movement and went on to describe how this work could be extended to reach those men who have not given a Christian meaning to their everyday life.

Following Mr. Hamilton's remarks, a color film entitled The Protestant Men Story was shown and it depicted how the Protestant Men Movement came into the life of one man and how his life was changed as a result of it.

Benediction was by Rev. Malcolm McQuig of the Kirk of St. James Church.

Scripture was read by Lloyd MacNevin and prayer was offered by Clair MacLeod.

Guest speaker for the evening was Ray Hamilton, director of Presbyterian Men of Toronto.

Collision Is Reported

The Charlottetown detachment of the RCMP reported a collision involving an ambulance and a one-ton truck occurred near Brown's lane on the St. Peters Road Monday night about 7:10 p.m.

Driver of the ambulance was reported as David James Lawlor or Charlottetown. The truck was operated by James Joseph McCloskey of New Wiltshire.

Both vehicles were travelling in the same direction at the time of the accident. There were no injuries reported.

An estimate of damage to the vehicles involved was not available.

Plant Visit Is Planned

A visit to Island Flax Company's plant at Freetown will be made this morning by representatives of a Glasgow, Scotland, firm which met with some members of the government yesterday to discuss the province's flax industry.

Reid Sangster, director of research and marketing, said that no ideas will be put forth by the visitors until they have had a chance to see the Freetown plant today.

Monthly Meeting Held Recently

A motion was passed at the April general meeting of the Kensington Royal Canadian Legion that the grounds surrounding the Legion Home be landscaped.

The motion followed the presentation of a plan presented by Stirling Campbell which was accepted by the meeting.

A Red Cross certificate of merit was received by the Legion for the excellent showing made by the local branch under the chairmanship of Earle Carrier at the last blood donor clinic.

The entertainment committee was authorized to make plans for a lobster supper for members, associate members, ladies auxiliary and their wives, husbands or other guests, to be held during the open lobster season.

It was announced that the provincial command convention is to be held in Kensington in September. Eric Jessome was appointed general chairman to prepare for the event.

Presbyterian Men Attend Rally Here

A large attendance of Presbyterian men from all churches in the P. E. I. Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada assembled in the Coles Memorial Hall of Zion Presbyterian Church on Monday evening.

Chairman for the evening was J. S. Stewart, president of the Presbytery Council of Presbyterian Men.

A short devotional period was held with John Bears as song leader and soloist and Eddy MacLaren as pianist.

Scripture was read by Lloyd MacNevin and prayer was offered by Clair MacLeod.

Guest speaker for the evening was Ray Hamilton, director of Presbyterian Men of Toronto.

Scout Council Hears Speaker

The updating of a program for Boy Scouts in keeping with modern society was the theme of an address by Deputy Chief Scout, Air Vice-Marshal James B. Harvey, A.F.C., CD, at a dinner of the P.E.I. Council of Boy Scouts at The Charlottetown Hotel last night. Brig. W.W. Reid, DSO, ED, president, presided.

Distinguished guests at the function included Lt. Governor W.J. MacDonald and Mrs. MacDonald, Mayor Walter Cox, and Mrs. James B. Harvey.

Ten awards for outstanding service to scouting were presented by the Lt. Governor. They were: Silver Acorn, Eric Tanton, district commissioner, Summerside; Medal of Merit, J. Frank Gaudet, assistant provincial commissioner; John N. Richard, former assistant provincial commissioner; Walter S. McMurtry, assistant provincial commissioner; and Frank J. Costello, scoutmaster 1st Parkdale Troop, Long Service Medal (10 years); Eileen Doyle, assistant cubmaster 6th Charlottetown; William Costello, cubmaster 6th Charlottetown; and Terrence Fitzgerald, cubmaster 2nd Charlottetown.

Char to Long Service Medal (15 years); Lois Brown, cubmaster 1st Parkdale; Arthur Perry, cubmaster 3rd Charlottetown.

The Deputy Chief Scout noted that while boys haven't changed their environment has, but there was still the traditional need for strong leadership, flexible training and character building. He praised the work of devoted volunteer leaders and interested citizens for their contribution in making scouting the success it was. He saw an increasing challenge to leadership in changing times.

Guest Speaker for the meeting was Father Allan MacDonald, professor of sociology at St. Dunstan's University who spoke on "poverty on P.E.I. and its implications therein."

The speaker stated: "We have poverty locally on P.E.I. and the first step to alleviate this is to raise the wages of the laboring man on P.E.I. which is now approximately 65 per cent of the national average."

"Twenty per cent of the families on P.E.I. are now trying to exist on $2,000 per year or less," said Father MacDonald. It was the opinion of the speaker that we should show strong public support of labor in their protest of low wages on P.E.I. He also stated that this question of low wages should be discussed in each and every community so that everyone will become familiar with existing conditions and make every effort to seek a just
