FISH LOAF—MUSTARD SAUCE

1/2 cup hot milk, 2 cups soft bread crumbs, 2 eggs, well-beaten, 1 cup flaked tuna fish, 3 tablespoons chopped celery, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup of pepper, 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine.

Four hot milk over bread crumbs and stir until the crumbs are well moistened. Add the remaining ingredients and mix well. Press mixture into a greased loaf pan and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F. for about 50 minutes. If a broyner loaf is desired, turn out, and broil until browned.

Serve with Mustard Sauce. Melt 2 1/2 tablespoons butter in top of double boiler over boiling water. Add 2 1/2 tablespoons flour and blend well. Add 2 cups milk gradually and cook until thickened. Add 1/4 cup prepared mustard and 1/2 teaspoon salt, and reheat. Serves 6.

Modern Etiquette

Q. If one is attending an informal dinner and notices that another guest seems to be taking no active part in the conversation, should one make a special effort to draw that guest into the conversation?

A. It is usually the duty of the hostess, not the guest, to see that each of her guests takes a part in the conversation and is being entertained. However, there is nothing wrong in such a friendly gesture by a guest.

Q. When a man is dining with a woman in a public place, is it permissible for him to suggest something on the menu?

A. This is quite all right, and especially if his companion seems undecided.

Q. Who stands the expense of the wedding breakfast in a hotel?

A. The parents of the bride.

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I remove medicine stains from sheets or linens?

A. By applying a paste of fuller's earth and ammonia to the spots. Leave this on until dry and then wash the stains out of the material with cold water. After the cold water treatment, wash in the regular manner.

Q. How can I prevent the juice from running out of fruit pie?

A. The juice will not run out if the edges of the bottom crust are wet before adding the top crust, and the edges are pressed firmly together.

Q. How can I keep tile floors bright and clean?

A. Wash them regularly with a soft cloth or mop wiping out of warm ammonia water.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"They were well worth waiting for"—a little lad who is inclined to drain to the dregs his days, so busy and interesting they are, and in consequence come to his homework with sleep. Jogging his heels, commented this evening pausing at the end of a sentence of lesson.

"We had to wait a long time," he continued, book idle on his knee. "Yes," he nodded, "a long time. But at last," he beamed, "they are here! I just bet there's none prettier anywhere! And it's not often," he continued, "that there are so many in a family of them. Four," he smiled, remembering the touching sight, "three whites and a black... It couldn't be better, now could it?"

We smiled too, rejoicing with this child in his happiness. It takes so little in the sight of their elders to set that "light that never was on sea or land" aglow in children's eyes.

"And now, let's see what happened to Bunny White Tail," we suggested. He glanced at the open page of lesson, yawned sleepily and "That must be the best place to have kittens," he observed. "Or else," he reasoned, "why do all our mother-cats go to that exact place in the stable to 'born' them?"

"Let's leave Bunny White Tail until morning," we said, knowing that now we labored in vain at our "building."

"Yes, let's," he agreed drowsily. "And instead, would you read a little something to me? I always sleep better after I'm read to!"

How welcome and lovely after the recent days of dampness was the sun of today, as it beamed benevolently upon the farmer and his fields and "all things that love" its light that were abroad! There was no hint of excuse in his smile nor did we ask for one, once he tucked back the flashing jewels in our length of millstream, and poured out his gold on meadow and woodland.

From Alderlea, where the farmers bent energies to the clearing of virgin land, preparatory to its

Packing Clothes

A point well worth remembering when packing clothes for a trip is to place tissue paper in the folds of the garments and in the sleeves. This goes a long way towards preventing them from creasing, and the garments will look much fresher when they are finally unpacked and hung on hangers.

Soup

A slice of raw potato added to soup that is too salty will take away that too-salty taste. Boil for a short time and it will be ready to serve.

Gasoline can be deodorized by adding five or six drops of oil of eucalyptus to each quart of gasoline used.

The Stars Say - -

By Genevieve Kemble

For Tomorrow

INSTEAD of taking chances this day, follow well-tested procedures both in business and domestic affairs. Your intuition is a bit off just now, so postpone untried ventures until a more propitious period.

The stars continue, however, to favor personal relationships, so go out of your way to be friendly with loved ones and business associates—even those at a distance. Write those long-overdue letters, make those long-postponed telephone calls, encourage good will generally.

The evening hours are excellent for community projects, social activities in the home and indulgence in hobbies.

For the Birthday

If tomorrow is your birthday, you may now be experiencing an urge to strike out against anything which seems to stand in the way of attaining your goals, but do not yield to drastic action. The emotional stress under which you are operating is due to the fact that while your mind and ambitions are keyed to their highest, progress seems slow. Relax, however. The hard work and steady endeavor you have put into your work during the past months have not been in vain. Rewards should begin to show—and probably—early in July.

At that time it might also be well for you to plan a short trip which will not only furnish the relaxation you need after the tensions undergone, but also will widen horizons and stimulate new friendships. Financial matters should prosper during the Fall, and domestic affairs should be unusually harmonious.

A child born on this day will be intelligent and ambitious, but inclined to impatience.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN—

Heartless Philanderer

Husband Pretends To Be Penitent But Receives Gifts From "Her"

DEAR MISS DIX: Last year my husband had an affair with a married woman. We separated over the liaison, but he soon returned, protesting his love for me and the children. However, the affair isn't entirely ended.

I'm sure they aren't seeing each other, but she sent him cards at Easter and a gift on his birthday. He refuses to write and ask her to stop sending him things. I feel he should return the gifts and cards unopened, but he insists on keeping them. Who is right? Incidentally I suspect he is receiving other mail from her at the office. MOLLY D.

Muriel Nissen

THERE'S A WAY

ANSWER: All the facts presented in your rather long letter indicate that your husband's concern is much more for the "other woman" than for you. You are playing second fiddle—and an out-of-tune one at that. You have talked to your husband about the affair, you have spoken to the woman—and all to no avail. Why not try an attack through the woman's husband? A man has little to lose through an extra-marital affair; he can invariably count on his wife waiting around for her penitent husband to come home. An erring wife, on the other hand, risks losing her maintenance and security—which are the prime considerations of a woman who doesn't know what the word "faithful" means. If you get hold of one of her letters to him, re-address it to her husband, at his place of business, if possible. The reaction to this strategy may give the lady quite a shock.

Your husband certainly should have written to the woman breaking up the affair, after he told you he had changed.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 15, and recently have had several dates with a handsome boy who is in several of my classes. For no reason that I know of, he stopped dating me and took another girl out. I was jealous, and wrote him a letter telling him exactly how I felt about it. To my amazement, I have discovered that he showed the letter to several of our mutual friends, who are consequently making fun of me.

DISAPPOINTED
ANSWER: You have learned one valuable lesson, namely, that "handsome is that handsome does"—that good looks sometimes cover an objectionable nature. It was a despicable thing to show your letter to others and thus heap on you the ridicule of your classmates. How you can continue to have any interest in a boy who is so contemptible is more than I can understand. Can't you see him in his true colors, and realize that he is conceited, mean, and incapable of liking anyone but himself? All you can do about the comments of others is to shrug them off with a smile. They'll forget in time about the episode. See that you do the same.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am allowed to date, but must be home by midnight. My boy friend thinks this is too early, so when he leaves me, he goes on to a date with someone else. He wants me to marry him and I do love him. He's 23 and I'm 17.

ANSWER: If the boy loved you, he wouldn't have the least interest in dating other girls. I'm afraid the "love" is all on your side. A boy closer to your own age would be a much better companion for you.

DEAR MISS DIX: Will you tell me something? If a boy gives a girl his school ring, and they both agree not to go out with anyone else, is that "going steady"? And would it mean that he has the intention of marrying the girl?

ANSWER: You have correctly interpreted the situation as "going steady," but marital intentions are not necessarily implied; that might come up later.
