Another Divorce Case.

Judge Walker, on the 7th inst., granted Elizabeth Beeler, of Indianapolis, a divorce from Jones Vestal Beeler, on proof of continued drunkenness. She is 62 years old, and he six years her senior, and they are parents of nineteen children, fourteen of whom are still alive, the youngest being ten years old. They nearly all sided with their mother in the suit, and several of them testified that their father was in the habit of getting "dead drunk" at least once a week, and at such times inclined to be cross and abusive. By agreement a division of the property—a farm of 120 acres in Decatur township—was made, she to receive thirty acres and the home, and he the remainder. Beeler was at one time quite wealthy, but has since lost most of his possessions. Nearly the entire family was in court, and the spectacle was an unusual one.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Steeple Cleydon Again.

SIR,—Three communications, each of them a violation of all rules of good taste, have lately appeared in the EXAMINER.
Their unknown author has undertaken to point out the weak points of Charlottetonian architecture, etiquette, etc.

Hitherto, his remarks have been treated to silent contempt; and he, doubtless, mistaking silence for approval, has become insolent. And politeness must now give way to measures better adapted to his practice and understanding.

Showing politeness to strangers and granting a certain deference to their views, are customs universally respected by Islanders. Now, these practices if unknown and unlearned for in the place that was honored by Steeple Cleydon's birth—though doubly honored and relieved by his departure—are yet respected by Islanders, even though their politeness is sometimes returned by insolence and open abuse.

"Steeple Cleydon" is evidently argue-eyed. He has calmly surveyed our public and private buildings, and has favored us with his criticism on their appearance. A curious feature of his letters, and a noticeable one at that, is the strong vein of aversion that runs through them to court houses, judges, (I suppose that to avoid awaking further unpleasant reminis-cences in his own mind he neglected to mention juries). Has this animosity to judges originated in the personal remarks of some judge acting in his official capacity?
And then his kindly comment on the appearance of Government House. Is this a feeble attempt to repay the debt of gratitude which he evidently owes to some occupant of some Government House, who may have, unfortunately for society, extended to him the privilege of patron?

Yours,
BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.

Ch'town, May 23, 1884.

Raising Colts.

The main idea with some farmers is to get as many colts as possible—a colt is a colt with them—for the least outlay. They get hold of an old broken down mare, inheriting ailments and blemishes. She still serves faithfully at the plow and harrow, where she cripples along under the combined influence of voice and lash.
Her days of road service are over. All she is good for now is to work on the land, and raise colts. The neighborhood is searched for a stallion whose service will not cost over $3 or $5. He may be a smart appearing beast, and on a par with the mare in pedigree. The farmer is satisfied, and only haggles a little as to price. This satisfactorily settled, the only anxiety is to see another head added to his drove. The colt is to be so much clear gait, so the mare's work must not be interrupted. She must use the harness right up to the day of foaling, and of course she is not worthy of the extra food needed by brood mares. The colt, of necessity, partakes of the weakness and ill-condition of the mother; it fails to receive sufficient nourishment to increase the little vitality inherited; is weak and puny until old enough to get further nourishment than the mother's milk.

Such a colt, dropped, is worth no more than the service price of the stallion; when broken, it is not worth the fodder it has eaten.

Let us reckon up what a common scrub colt costs at three years of age:

Service of stallion..... $ 8 Loss of time for mare..... 10 First winter's keep..... 15 First summer's pasturage..... 12 Second winter's keep..... 12 Second summer's pasturage..... 18 Third winter's keep..... 22

Total..... $102

These figures are moderate, I think, and do not include any risk, as they should.
Now I can buy all the scrub colts of that age that my pasture will hold, for $75 each.
There may be $27 worth of pleasure in raising such colts, otherwise the amount is a dead loss.

I acknowledge there is an occasional colt from scrub stock that has extraordinary good qualities—is symmetrical in form, and active. The ambitious owner of such male colts usually raises them for breeders, that they may, for the rest of their lives, transmit weakness and disease to a new race of miserable brutes, at from $3 to $5 per head.

Many a broken-down mare, if served with a thoroughbred stallion, and well used during her period of pregnancy, will foal a fine colt, and if well fed, and worked but little during the summer, she will rear it in a thrifty condition.

It costs no more to rear a good colt than a scrub. Let us think of this matter before we engage a stallion this spring.
