

Quebec Students Say Views Might Change On Separatism

QUEBEC (CP)—A spokesman for a group of college students said here knowledge of economic repercussions might reverse the group's support for separatism which was expressed in a brief to the Quebec legislative assembly's committee on the Canadian constitution.

Paul Gerin - LaJeie, Quebec education minister and chairman of the committee, asked the spokesman whether the group would continue to support separatism if this meant "sacrificing hundreds of millions of dollars."

Jacques Pepin, secretary of the association representing 150 college students attending the St. Marie Seminary in Shawinigan, Que., replied the group had not examined this possibility.

"Under this assumption, we might perhaps revise our opinion," he said.

Pearson Says Some Changes Are Essential

OTTAWA (CP)—Failure to adapt to a changing environment is fatal because "the penalty is extinction," Prime Minister Pearson said here.

"I refuse to believe Canada will commit that sin," he said in a speech to the national conference on labor-management relations.

Changes in environment have meant changes in the role of the federal and provincial governments in Canada, Mr. Pearson said. The days when the responsibilities of each level of government could be divided neatly into compartments no longer existed.

"A healthy federalism . . . is one in which the two levels of government fulfil their own responsibilities and respect each other's, but they do so taking into account their mutual concerns."

Compromise and co-operation are essential, he said, but a difficulty with compromises was that "they are easy targets for people who choose to believe . . . for their own purposes . . . to make others believe . . . that any general agreement must mean individual surrender; and that therefore any compromise is capitulation."

Mr. Pearson said there was a continuing need in Canada for a strong central government.

"That need must be met or Canada cannot survive in any tolerable way. Such survival in strength is surely as much a matter of provincial as of federal concern."

Text of his speech was released in advance.
