

Premier Seeking Market In Potato-Hungry Britain

Premier Walter R. Shaw was in touch Friday with Watson James, Atlantic Province's representative in London in regard to the sale of potatoes in the old country, where a definite shortage exists.

Premier Shaw said he impressed on Mr. James the importance of using every influence to receive a market in Britain for the province's surplus tubers.

no danger in protecting the Old Country's interest in this regard. The Premier pointed out that under the same careful management and direction potatoes were shipped in 1940 and proved to be satisfactory.

Premier Shaw also contacted trade and commerce department officials and urged prompt consideration of this problem. He was assured that the department was already in touch with British officials and was doing everything possible to bring about a sale. He was assured that he would be kept in close contact with the situation as it developed.

Trout Are Caught As Season Opens

Fishermen yesterday baited their hooks, gathered lines, rods or poles and flocked off to streams and ponds as the angling season opened this year.

The enthusiastic anglers this year were treated to somewhat better conditions than last year's. Ice and snow covered waters and snow drifts.

The temperature for the day was between 32 and 40 degrees, with winds between 20 and 40 mph, although early-morning gusts were recorded of up to 50 mph. It was mainly sunny, except for a few snowflakes and cloudy periods.

Due to the severe floods of the past weeks, almost all streams were muddy and riled as one observer put it. Ponds in general were said to be clear.

The usual opening day crowd was on hand at Clark's Pond, in Wilmet Valley about five miles east of Summerside. The pond has been recently stocked so catches should be relatively good.

As yet, few reports of large catches or sizes have been received, but Lorne Leard, Alberton, caught a two-pound, two-ounce trout plus eight other fish. Ivan Clow, Emerald last night brought a one-pound, 10-ounce rainbow trout into the Guardian office that he had caught in the Dunk River.

In the Southern Kings areas Kenney MacDonald and Paul and Keith Collins of Montague each got his limit of 20 fish.

Additional reports will probably be received this morning as The Evening Patriot fishing competition draws to a close.

Liberal Candidates Seeking Ottawa Support For U.K. Sale

An appeal for the intervention of the Canadian Government to assist the sale of the P.E.I. potato surplus to Great Britain was directed personally to Hon. J. Angus MacLean and Joseph Macquarrie at Ottawa by Queens County Liberal candidates, Alvin Lewis and Ira Lewis in a telegraphic appeal yesterday.

Mr. Lewis said that when a similar situation existed in 1947 the government of that day had been able to persuade the British government to remove import restrictions.

As a result of this action, Mr. Lewis said, 10 boat loads of potatoes were sold in the United Kingdom. This disposed of the island surplus at a high price and at the same time provided a great deal of employment along the local waterfront where many of the sites were loaded.

The Liberal candidates stated they felt if the Canadian Government was made aware of the seriousness of the situation here and the relevant relief of the farmers that similar satisfactory arrangements might be accompanied her husband George Prece, who sailed from Halifax on the S.S. Commonwealth Countries Must Contribute - Amory British High Commissioner to Canada, Rt. Hon. Viscount Amory of Tiverton, C.M.G., said in Charlottetown Saturday evening that if the Commonwealth is to endure, urgent thought and study must be given to the aspect of member countries contributing as well as taking. He said that without responsibilities a duty, membership would be likely to become too diluted to mean much.

Viscount Amory was speaking to a special meeting of the Prince Edward Island Canadian Club at the Charlottetown Hotel. The president, A.D. Cameron, presided.

One danger we are witnessing is the United Nations today," Viscount Amory said in a readiness in some quarters to support any action which has an anti-colonial aim regardless of its moral justification. Force, he alleged, is justifiable if it has an anti-colonial objective.

It is an attitude surely in direct conflict with the principles and objects for which the United Nations was founded. "Another current danger is the misuse of the words 'justice' and 'democracy' again actively promoted by Communist regimes today in various parts of the world in the name of democracy which are in fact in direct contradiction to its principles."

He referred to the Commonwealth as being the boldest experiment in multilateral cooperation that mankind has ever known. The guest speaker explained that the Commonwealth "does not have the minimum number of rules which govern the conduct of even the least purposeful club. There, therefore, be no penalties for breaking rules."

"The Commonwealth has a no secretariat or central organization. It has no formal links at all except the recognition and acknowledgment of the Queen as its sovereign but as titular Head of the Commonwealth."

Noting that membership of the Commonwealth enhances rather than reduces the free will and influence of its separate members.

freedom of the individual and respect for minority views, and give and take in practical affairs—that sense of fairness that is probably the greatest gift of the English speaking nations to the world.

Two big tasks With Britain and Canada being older members of the Commonwealth, the guest speaker observed that they have a great responsibility and that two big tasks lie ahead of them. One of these, he pointed out, is to raise the standards of living among the peoples of Asia and Africa. The other is to prove that "the way of life in which we have staked our faith is in practice as good as the claims we make for it."

"And let us—in Britain and you in Canada—resolve that whatever new policies and organizations world changes impose upon us, they shall not weaken the links that common kinship, the close comradeship of two world wars and the friendship of a 100 years and more have forged so firmly. Let us be proud of our common traditions and of our allegiance to the same Queen and endeavour to be worthy of them and of those who come before us in the challenging days ahead," Lord Amory concluded.
