Ingenious tests Planned In Hunt For Cancer Virus

By FRANK CAREY PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—An ingenious new "molecular fingerprinting" test should make it possible within a year to determine whether at least one family of viruses can cause human cancers, a top cancer researcher said here.

Dr. Maurice Green of St. Louis University school of medicine said the testing technique which involves use of radioactive tritium, one of the ingredients of the H-bomb—should make it possible to determine whether any human malignancies are due to widely prevalent "adenoviruses," a common cause of certain respiratory illness in man.
